Ship Unions Ask Support Of Foreign Workers

Curran and Bridges Cable Appeal for Scab Label for Any Vessel U. S. Seizes

By the Associated Press

CIO Maritime leaders, criticizing President Truman anew, last night appealed to foreign workers to support their June 15 strike by considering as "scab ships" any vessels operated by the U. S. armed forces.

Joseph Curran and Harry Bridges made the appeal in a cablegram to the World Federation of Trade Unions at Paris.

If a vessel were considered a "scab ship" dock workers in Britain, France and Russia probably would refuse to load and unload it.

A spokesman for Curran and Bridges said that the executive council of the WFTU would meet in Moscow on June 16-18 and might discuss the CIO appeal at that time.

Repeat Their Criticism

Curran and Bridges, in their cablegram, repeated their criticism of President Truman for saying that he would use the armed forces, if necessary, to keep the ships running.

"In event negotiations fail," they said in the message, "we ask maximum support in strike by refusal to work ships manned by Government and declared scab ships with the exception of troop and relief ships as we determine them."

The message said Mr. Truman's statement—given at a news conference Friday—had "seriously jeopardized" the possibilities for a settlement.

"Unions in other countries and affiliates of WFTU are bound to be directly involved if the strike takes place. We are anxious to receive immediate word from WFTU on most effective support World Federation can render."

Are Cochairmen

Curran and Bridges are cochairmen of the Committee for Maritime Unity, which is carrying on negotiations with ship operators at the Labor Department here.

The cablegram said the CMU wanted the matter placed before the general assembly of the WFTU and is prepared to send a special delegate to attend the sessions.

Louis Goldblatt, secretary of the CMU, made the cablegram public.

A spokesman for the CMU said the World Federation of Trade Unions includes "ovef 60 million workers in more than 40 countries." In reply to a question he said the affiliated unions included the dock workers in Britain, France, and Russia, for example.

For three hours yesterday, CIO maritime leaders argued that their demand for a 40-hour week for merchant seamen is not "impossible" as ship operators have stated.

No Indication of Progress

With less than two weeks remaining before a scheduled June 15 strike of seamen and dock workers, there was no indication that wage and hour negotiations had moved any closer to a settlement.

Negotiations were recessed until today at 11 a. m.

Edgar L. Warren, director of the United States Conciliation Service, told reporters at 7 p. m. that the National Maritime Union had submitted a specific and detailed proposal dealing with the question of hours.

He said it was not a new demand, but a proposal designed to show how a 40-hour week could be adapted to the shipping industry.

Warren also said the Atlantic and Gulf ship operators had not yet made any counterproposals.

Meanwhile, representatives of West Coast ship operators and water-front employers were ready to begin negotiations on demands of other CIO Maritime Unions, whenever the NMU and the Eastern ship operators have completed their talks at the Labor Department.

To Return When Needed

Frank P. Foisie, chairman of the Waterfront Employers Association of the Pacific Coast, said that he and John B. Bryan, representing Pacific ship operators, may return to San Francisco temporarily tonight, but if they do, they will be ready to come back any time they are needed.

When asked if the West Coast group was "walking out" on the conferences, Foisie said, "Oh, certainly not. We will remain on call."

Bridges and Curran, cochairmen of the committee for maritime unity representing the four CIO unions and one independent union which have voted to strike, have made the 40-hour week for Freak Wind Does Extensive Damage in D. C.

Garages Smashed, Rooftops Lifted; Jessup, Md., Man Is Killed by Train

A violent wind storm that reached near-cyclonic velocities in some areas roared through Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia yesterday at 9:30 a. m., uprooting trees, lifting rooftops and smashing garages.

The freakish winds were accompanied by a torrential downpour lasting about two minutes in the areas hit and by a 14-degree drop in temperature in one hour.

Victims whose houses were hit said the storm struck "with a horrible roar."

Train Kills Jessup Man

Joseph Wolf, 38, of Jessup, Md., was killed by a train during the heavy rain squall as he crossed Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks near Jessup. Maryland State Police believed Wolf, father of three children, might have failed to see the train because of the rain.

The storm came with passage of a cold front moving southward from the Hudson Bay region, the Weather Bureau reported. Last night the front was moving through southeast Virginia toward the Atlantic.

The weatherman said Washington could expect "fine weather" today, with sunny skies and temperatures rising to the low 70's.

Temperatures sank from 70 degrees at 8:46 a. m. to 56 degrees at 9:48 a. m. as the storm struck, the weatherman said.

Damage Is Extensive

While property damage was extensive, police said, no other persons were injured in the storm, which followed a crazy-quilt pattern through northwest Washington, southern Maryland and Alexandria, Va.

In Washington at least a dozen trees were uprooted, police reported. At National Airport, the Weather Bureau reported wind velocities of 58 miles-an-hour with a 180-degree change in wind direction within five minutes. Observers said the winds twisted from southeast around to northwest.

Miss Irene O'Donnell of 1931 K st. nw., narrowly escaped injury when a tree crashed through the window of her third-floor room, scattering glass through her room.

One of the limbs of the falling tree crashed through a first-floor office window upsetting a desk. A second tree in front of the building was uprooted.

Union Blast At Labor Bill Set in House

Attack Arranged By 16 Congressmen Aimed at Stemming Original 'Hysteria'

By the Associated Press

Sixteen Congressmen yesterday arranged a blast by top labor leaders at President Truman's strike control bill today and invited the whole House to listen before voting on it the second time.

Representative De Lacy (D., Wash.), declared the informal hearing was planned to "stem the hysteria under which many had voted" when they passed, 306 to 13, the measure just as proposed by Mr. Truman on the heels of the railroad strike. The meeting will be held at 4 p. m., in Room 1334 of the New House Office Building.

Now back in the House after getting through the Senate in diluted form, the measure faced not only stronger opposition but an effort to tie its fate with the Case labor disputes bill, which is before President Truman for his veto or approval.

Favor Holding Back

Some key law makers have declared they favor holding back on the President's own emergency labor bill until he signs the Case bill with its broad powers over union activities.

Mr. Truman has withheld any indication of what he will do about the Case bill.

He was under bombardment by appeals from both sides. The bill threatened to influence political alignments in the 1946 congressional races and the 1948 presidential campaign—as well as the President's own relations with Congress.

The 16 Congressmen—all Democrats but one—announced that today's assault on the Truman strike bill will be led by AFL President William Green, CIO President Philip Murray; A. E. Lyon, secretary-treasurer of the Railway Labor Executives Association, and President Harvey Brown of the International Association of Machinists (independent).

Others Are Listed

Congressmen listed in the statement, in addition to De Lacy were: Bailey (W. Va.), Celler (N. Y.), Healy (Calif.), Kelley (Pa), Neely (W Va.), Klein (N. Y.), Morgan (Pa.), Patterson (Calif), Savage (Wash.), and Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.).

De Lacy said labor "had no chance to be heard before the bill was rushed through."

Before unlimbering on Capitol Hill against the President's own bill, CIO President Murray urged Mr. Truman to veto the Case measure. He made public a letter to the President asserting that the measure is "anti-labor" and would "increase labor disputes."

Murray called the bill "exclusively and aggressively antilabor." He said not one of its provisions would promote industrial peace, reduce strikes, or shorten their duration.

He declared this "historic attack on labor, Mr. President, must be smashed because a free labor movement is a vital part of a free America."

Countering such criticism, so-called old-line Democrats in Congress have been addressing appeals by telephone, letter and personal call to Mr. Truman to sign the Case measure.

These Democrats, mostly Southerners, say that Mr. Truman lost vocably the support of labor leaders by his demands for drastic strike control legislation, but they contend that many in labor's ranks will side with the President against their own chieftains.

They add that the President made himself popular with large seg-

Women Flock To Polls in Italian Election

Rome, June 2 (AP).—Italians in great numbers, among them nuns and priests, flocked to the polls today to register their decision between a monarchy and a republic.

Women, voting for the first time in this first free nation-wide election since the advent of Mussolini, turned out in large numbers.

Catholic priests and nuns, heeding instructions from the Vatican to vote, also were out en masse. A Vatican communique this afternoon excluded members of the curia—cardinals resident in Rome—from voting.

Everywhere voting was heavy, and in virtually all Italy it was quiet, as Italians cast their ballots for or against King Umberto, and for members of a national assembly to frame Italy's new constitution.

Each voter got 27 lists with 33 candidates for the Constituent Assembly on each. At the same time he voted on the monarchy or republic. There were almost 5000 candidates of 70 parties with 573 deputies to be chosen.

A spokesman declined to disclose the whereabouts of King Umberto, who received the crown from his father, Vittorio Emmanuele, less than a month ago.

However, like other residents of cities of more than 500 population, he had until noon tomorrow, the hour when the polls close.

No trustworthy information on the result can be expected until the official announcement some time after June 7.

The Ministry of the Interior said all 89 of the provinces reported good order at the polls. Only in Rome, where late opening of some polling places provoked impatient voters to protest, was any real trouble reported. There, flying squads of Caribinieri quickly quieted the crowds.

In Milan, a single disorder was reported. A bomb tossed early this morning at the building where a Socialist, a Communist and an independent newspaper are printed did minor damage and injured four workmen. The bomb tossers fired several shots and vanished.

De Gaulle's Party Polls Plurality In Assembly

Retired President May Be Called Back; MRP Seats 160, Reds 145, Socialists 115

Paris (Monday), June 3 (AP).—French leftists suffered a sharp setback yesterday in the national elections for a new constitutent assembly, with the centrist Popular Republican Movement (MRP) ousting the Communists as the nation's most powerful single party, returns for all of continental France showed today.

Unofficial figures issued by the Interior Ministry showed the MRP won 160 seats in the assembly of the 522 allotted to continental France.

The Interior Ministry's figures for continental France and Corsica showed the Communists took 145 seats, the Socialists 115, the Rightist Liberal Republicans (PRL) 59 and the Republican Rally (Radical Socialists) 43. The MRP won no seats in the Corsica voting.

Second Within Month

The defeat was the second suffered by the Communists within a month. In the referendum of May 5, French voters defeated a proposed national constitution supported by the Communists.

The MRP victory touched off unconfirmed rumors at the Interior Ministry that the MRP—one of whose leaders is Foreign Minister Georges Bidault—might ask General DeGaulle, former interim president, to return to politics as its candidate to head the new provisional government.

The over-all vote, as revealed by the Ministry of Interior at 5 a. m., showed: Popular Republicans, 5,142,488; Communists, 4,958,176; Socialists, 3,840,324; Republican Union, 1,973,201, and Republican Party of Liberty (PRL) and other right wing parties, 2,336,437.

The MRP's unofficial total of 160 seats—with colonial returns yet to be received—surpassed the Communist hold on the previous constituent assembly.

At last October's election, the Communists gained 159 seats on the basis of the vote of the entire French electorate, including the colonies.

Other Representation

Other representation in the Assembly on the basis of last October's elections was: MRP, 150 members; Socialists and affiliates, 146; Republican Rally and affiliates, 60, and the PRL and affiliates, 64.

Final unofficial returns from the six districts of Paris and its suburbs, compared with the national election results of last October, showed the following number of deputies elected by the competing parties:

Communists, 18 (22 in October).
MRP, 12 (17 in October).
Socialists, 11 (12 in October).
PRL, 7 (none in October).
Republican Rally, 3 (none in October).

The Socialists lost heavily despite popularity gained by their leader, Leon Blum, as the result of his recent negotiation of a loan from the United States. The party's pre-election campaign was highlighted by a violent anti-Communist drive.

The MRP, the Communists and the Socialists formed a three-party coalition which governed France before today's elections, and it was indicated the same bloc probably would continue to rule the nation.

Thorez, Daladier Win

Maurice Thorez, secretary-general of the French Communist Party, was reelected to the constituent assembly by a Parisian constituency, while prewar Premier Edouard Daladier, defeated last October, was elected by voters in his district in the south of France.

Other successful candidates included former Premier Edouard Herriot, Radical-Socialist leader; Pierre Mendes-France, France's financial expert at the Bretton Woods Monetary Conference; former Premier Paul Reynaud and Michael Clemenceau, son of the World War I leader.

The returns indicated that President Felix Gouin's entire cabinet would retain seats in the assembly. Gouin, the Socialist leader, was reelected, as was Bidault, MRP leader and French Foreign Minister.

The voting provided the surprise defeat of two of Gen. De Gaulle's

Life Escape-Proof Tomb

People's Will to Start Anew Only Ray of Hope in Warsaw

(Post Reporter Michael Frome, who has served as navigator of transatlantic planes carrying UNRRA supplies to Europe, spent much of the last fortnight in Warsaw. There he interviewed nearly all government and opposition leaders. This is the second of five uncensored articles.)

By Michael Frome
Post Reporter

Look across the ocean and the Continent of Europe. Have a look at Warsaw. It was a great city once, a work of art it took centuries to mold. Now it lies in ruins, almost level with the ground, a mass of wreckage and rubble.

This is the most completely shattered city on the European Continent, the testament of Hitler's war.

Berlin, Naples, Manila—they were left bleeding by the war; but how can they compare to Warsaw—they still have whole buildings standing!

In all the world today Warsaw is probably the most depressing sight; its only redeeming feature the spirit of the people to clear away the debris, to live on and rebuild.

Warsaw is like a tomb from which there is no escape. No matter where you go in the city the sight remains the same: bricks instead of buildings, walls ready to fall when you push them.

That was the sickening, tearful picture I saw in Warsaw. When I walked amid the ruins people would point to jagged twisting steel and stone and say, "That was our railroad station."

Or, "That was our theater; that was the best hotel; that was the monument to our unknown soldier; that was the city hall, the palace of the kings, the cathedral. That was . . ."

And all we saw were gaping holes in the ground and bricks and plaster.

Probably the worst sight of all was the ghetto, the walled city of Warsaw's large Jewish population. Here nothing was left, the walls were as crumbled and shattered as the buildings, still and lifeless as the hundreds of thousands of murdered Jews.

Here and there among the ghetto ruins we saw an old man or an old woman picking around, lifting up the stones. I asked the guide what they were looking for.

"They're looking, that's all," he said. "There are still many people buried under here and they're looking for their families, that's all."

It was a sunny Sunday morning, my last day in Warsaw. They were selling bright flowers on the street and there were even one or two street photographers, just as we have them in Washington—they take your picture and give you a coupon. I went for a tour of the Old City of Warsaw with a young Polish girl, who had herself only recently returned from the United States.

The Old City would be like our Georgetown, except that it was 800 years old, of fine Gothic architecture, with the house fronts done in frescoes. Here was the heart of the insurrection, where the Poles struck for freedom and fought from house to house.

We passed St. John's Church, where only the tablet remained and what had once been Ambassador Cudahy's house next door. We entered what was left of a room here

Raises Opposed By Only 7 Per Cent

Eight of every 10 local residents believe that District teachers should get a raise. Only 7 per cent would oppose raising teachers' salaries, the latest Post Poll reveals. The remainder are undecided.

In general, Washingtonians believe teachers should be paid more than policemen, stenographers and bricklayers, about the same as a nurse and less than a lawyer.

Individual expressions of opinions on Page B-1.

Washingtonians were asked:

"Do you think that school teachers' salaries in the District should be raised, or not?"

Here are their answers:

Should have a raise	79%
Should not	7
Undecided	14

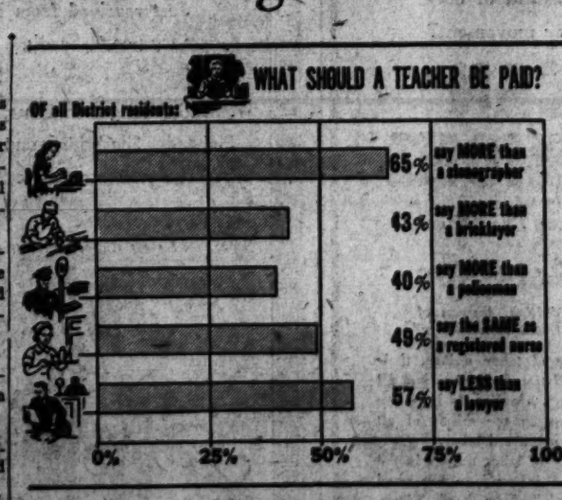
Only 2 per cent of District residents feel that school teachers should be paid less than $2000 a year. Twenty-one per cent of residents believe teachers should be paid $2000 to $2400 a year, while 41 per cent would place teachers' salaries in the $2401 to $3300 a year bracket. Seventeen per cent of residents expressed the belief that teachers should be paid $3301 to $4000 while 3 per cent want teachers to be paid more than $4000 a year. Sixteen per cent gave "don't know" answers.

These responses came in answer to the question: "Will you tell me approximately how much you think a teacher should be paid here in the District?" The present minimum wage for elementary teachers is $1900. High school teachers are started at $2100.

Local residents were asked:

"In your opinion, how much does a school teacher deserve compared to a policeman? A stenographer? A bricklayer? A registered nurse? A lawyer?

Here are the answers:



Some Advocate Top Of $4000 a Year

Less	22	5	26	27	57

When Washingtonians were asked:

"Will you tell me approximately how much you think a teacher should be paid here in the District?"

They answered as follows:

Teachers should be paid	Per Cent
Under $2000 a year	2
$2000 to $2400	21
$2401 to $3300	41) 61%
$3301 to $4000	17)
Over $4000 a year	3)
Don't know	16

The District Commissioners have scheduled a hearing for 2:30 p. m Tuesday on a proposal to give teachers a $600 a year raise across the board. The hearing will be held in the District Building board room.

Delegates Favoring Break With Spain

U. N. Council Meets Thursday to Act On Recommendation

New York, June 2 (AP).—A generally favorable reaction was registered among delegates to the United Nations Security Council today to the recommendations of a subcommittee for a world-wide break of diplomatic relations with Spain unless the Franco regime is "withdrawn" by September.

Some of the delegates admitted they were surprised that the five-man group went so far, since the Council itself previously had hesitated to propose such action.

The report followed a month's investigation of Poland's charges that Franco was a threat to world peace.

The Council will meet Thursday to act on the recommendations.

U. S. Position Undetermined

It was pointed out that the report already had the support of the five nations represented on the subcommittee—France, China, Australia, Poland and Brazil—which would make it extremely difficult for any of the other six delegates on the Council to get enough votes for a major change.

Brazilian Delegate Pedro Leao Velloso, a member of the subcommittee during its inquiry, expressed belief that no serious modifications would be made.

A similar view was expressed personally by a spokesman for the U. S. delegation, who pointed out, however, that the official American position had not yet been determined.

No immediate reaction from Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko was available, but delegates expected him to oppose some of the points of the report on the basis of his previous position.

A negative vote by Russia would automatically kill the subcommittee's recommendations. It was pointed out, however, that Gromyko might do as he did when the subcommittee was created April 29—express his opposition by abstaining from voting.

Russia Wants Action

The points most likely to be opposed by Russia are:

1. The finding that the Security Council has no jurisdiction to direct severance of diplomatic relations with Spain because the Franco regime is only "a potential threat to international peace" and not an actual threat.

2. The recommendation that the case be referred to the General Assembly for action.

Gromyko has contended that Franco is a definite threat to world peace now and that immediate action should be taken by the Security Council itself for a break.

The recommendation that the question be referred to the Assembly brings up anew the old controversy over whether the Security Council or the Assembly should become the major organ of the United Nations.

The one proposal which was expected to be approved without opposition was that the Council indorse the March 4 declaration of the United States, Britain and France calling upon the Spanish people to oust Franco by peaceful means and set up an interim or "caretaker" government until free elections could be held.

Spain to Ignore Action

Madrid, June 2 (INS).—Officials of the Franco government declared tonight that Spain will ignore any possible mass rupture of diplomatic relations by the United Nations.

News of the committee's report was broken gently by the controlled press of Spain. The public was told that the report "exhorted" a diplomatic break with the Franco regime, but care was taken not to mention the strong terminology in which the report was couched, or the fact that a deadline for Franco's resignation had been stipulated.

Poland Plans To Welcome Foreign Press

Warsaw, June 1 (Delayed) (U.P.).—Prime Minister Eduard Boleslaw Osubka-Morawski promised today that foreign correspondents would be allowed to enter Poland and travel freely, now and during the forthcoming referendum and elections.

"We have several foreign correspondents here now," he said. "We not only have no objection to more of them; others also are heartily invited."

Osubka-Morawski considered the presence of foreign correspondents advantageous and hoped their dispatches would be "honest reporting."

Meanwhile, Stanislaw Mikolajczyj, leader of the Polish Peasant Party (PSL), announced that police had "dissolved" four more PSL councils, bringing the total to six.

Government spokesmen denied that the councils were "dissolved." They said they were "temporarily suspended for investigations of local leaders suspected of illegal activity."

Security Minister Stanislaw Radkiewicz said underground bands and terrorists were being rounded up by the government. He charged that they were aided by agents of Lieut. Gen. Wladyslaw Anders, commander of Second Polish Corps. The agents, he said, were "supplied with arms and money from abroad."

former ministers—Rene Pleven, former Finance Minister, and Jacques Soustelle, former Minister of Information.

Gen. Henri Giraud, one-time rival of Gen. De Gaulle in North Africa, also was elected a deputy.

Under France's complicated system of proportional representation, which calls for voting by lists and the allocation of extra seats on the basis of majority vote in individual departments, the popular vote is not reflected evenly in the number of elected deputies until the completion of final computations.

586 Seats at Stake

Of the 586 seats at stake in this election, 522 are for continental France, 64 for the colonies.

Early in the day heavy rains fell and voting booths virtually were deserted. Reappearance of the sun in the afternoon brought voters out in large numbers.

Approximately 20 million voters had been expected to go to the polls throughout the empire, to choose from 3000 candidates the 586 members of a Constituent Assembly which will make a new attempt to frame the constitution for France's Fourth Republic.

The previous assembly had drafted a leftist supported constitution calling for an all-powerful one-house legislature. It was defeated in the referendum of May 5, in the first major setback for the French leftists since the liberation. The Popular Republican (Gen. Charles de Gaulle's party) contended the constitution lacked checks and balances and favored a leftist dictatorship. This party called for a strong executive and judiciary.

Study Shows Snail Attains High Speed Of 90 Miles a Year

London, June 2 (U.P.).—Contrary to popular opinion that he is slow, the average snail travels at a speed of 90 miles a year.

This fact is furnished by Peter Henniker-Heaton, who is so interested in snails that two months ago he organized the British Snail Watching Society.

Snail watchers all over Britain began clamoring to join and today it has 60 members.

The snail is short-sighted, Henniker-Heaton discovered, but it has a keen sense of smell. Science still hasn't learned about the snail's hearing.

One old woman called to Yasha and Tasha (brothers, I suppose) and threw them each a crumb.

How could an entire city have been destroyed as completely as Warsaw? What are the people of the city, and the government, doing to rebuild?

Michal Kaczorowski (Katorovsky), Minister of Reconstruction, another of the "Iron Curtain" dynasty, gave me the history of the destruction, the efforts to rebuild and explained that American ingenuity can play a great part in the effort.

Annihilation Plot

"Devastation in Poland was not the simple result of war," he said. "It was a planned action designed to annihilate the Polish nation. If the plan was not completely successful it was only because the war ended too soon.

"The ruins of Warsaw are the sum total of the campaign of 1939; the systematic destruction of the ghetto; the Warsaw insurrection, and the battles of the Russians. The greatest damage was done after the insurrection when the Germans knew they must flee. They burned the older buildings and mined the new ones. The few buildings that avoided total destruction were spared only because the Germans used them until the very end.

"As a result of the German scheme, about 380,000 farm structures and 400,000 city buildings were destroyed. This represents a physical value of 14 billion prewar zlotyz, or 3 billion American dollars.

River Bank Stone Desert

"When Warsaw was liberated in January, 1945, the left bank of the Vistula River was a complete stone desert. There were no inhabitants. It was full of corpses and debris, without a single building fit for use."

The minister, who gave the appearance of a modern American businessman, spoke with feeling. Although this might have been the simple recitation of statistics, it had become the unfolding of a drama, quite moving not only to myself but the interpreter as well.

"We were then faced with the tremendous task of reconstructing a city with neither income nor a source of income," he continued. "Transportation, communications, commerce, industry, education and science centers had all been thoroughly obliterated.

Capital Transferred

"It was our task and duty to create these activities anew. We began by moving the capital from Lublin to Warsaw. The decision was a difficult one. It was war time and the political situation was not clear. Warsaw was not only in ruins, but cut off from the rest of the country—without telephone or telegraph. Yet the government came here and began to work under those trying circumstances.

"And we see the results: About half a million people live and work in Warsaw. It is the indisputable capital of the Polish Republic. All prewar colleges and institutions of higher learning have already been reopened, even though their buildings were destroyed. Scientific institutes are working again. We have theaters . . . water, electric and gas systems are operating as well as the buses and trams, all of which were destroyed.

On Firm Footing

"Small manufacture and private industry are on a firm footing. Poles have a deep attachment for their capital and have succeeded in animating this desert through their own efforts and sacrifice. This was truly a great achievement because we lacked technical apparatus and material and the workman followed immediately in the footsteps of the soldier.

"The reconstruction problem is, of course, not limited to Warsaw. Some of our greatest centers—Danzig, Stettin, Breslau—are in ruins, together with hundreds of smaller cities. During the past year we concentrated on Warsaw. Now we are stressing the other centers and the huge task of rehabilitating the rural areas.

"In connection with the farm problem, it must be remembered that for nearly half a year the fighting front was on the rivers Wislocka, Vistula and Narow. Vast desolate areas were left in those regions—buildings destroyed, fields cut up with trenches; barbed-wire fences and mines everywhere (and some of the mines are still there), and the population deprived of its livestock and farm equipment.

Still Live in Dugouts

"Even today many people live in wartime underground dugouts. We are striving to bring these people to the surface of the earth, so they may resume a normal life. Our program for this year calls for the construction of 50,000 farm buildings.

"We realize fully that we must do the large part of the reconstruction ourselves and with our own energy. But any help from the outside would be of great value, for it would immediately increase our productive capacity."

Kaczorowski stopped after the long discussion. "More?" he smiled.

We'd been exchanging cigarettes, he smoking my American brand and I his Polish. I offered him another one and said, "More."

"What we need most is better organization, planning and modern techniques. If the American Kaiser built a ship within three days during the war it points to the ability of American industry to erect buildings with incredible speed."

Not Confusing "Kaisers"

Here he went back to say that he was not confusing "the American Kaiser" with Germany's Wilhelm.

"We have heard how fast war factories were built both in Russia and the United States. This modern method must be adapted to Poland, for if we are to fulfill our tasks we must build quickly and cheaply.

"From the Soviet Union we have already received means of communication, trolleys and the only bridge we have over the Vistula (although we ourselves have already built a railroad bridge and are about to complete a steel bridge). Moreover, this neighboring nation has promised to contribute half the cost of rebuilding Warsaw.

"Through UNRRA we have ordered the necessary heavy building apparatus and it is starting to arrive now. This is extremely important in helping us modernize our techniques.

Must Raise Standards

"As to the future: the Polish people, before and during the war, became accustomed to a low standard of living. Raising that standard, although of prime importance, is not as vital as progressing in science and industry. We know that we have many years of hard work before we attain the American level of life. That is why we place such stress on the speedy restitution of schools and technical institutes.

"In this work we are hoping for the help of the rest of the world, for we no longer have the necessary books, laboratories or instruments. With this help we will not only have the tools for our own reconstruction but will be able to share in the regeneration of society and culture throughout the world."

Work 56 to 63 Hours

Spokesmen for Atlantic and Gulf ship operators said such a short a week at sea, with stewards workweek at sea would be "impossible." Most seamen now work 56 hours ing 63.

Though there was nothing to indicate an early compromise on this point, the Labor Department at least could say with a suggestion of relief that Saturday night's meeting had been "a good session of genuine collective bargaining," with both sides "cooperative."

Labor Department mediators have stressed the complex nature of the negotiations. Questions of wages and hours for maritime workers are proving much more complicated than they have been in most of the other big recent labor disputes.

3 Employer Groups Involved

There are three groups of employers involved, in addition to the five unions. The Committee for Maritime Unity, which acts as bargaining agent for each union in turn, was formed three weeks ago by six CIO unions and one independent group—with the ultimate objective of merging into one big union. Two of the CMU affiliates have not voted to strike.

Bridges and Curran are doing most of the talking on the labor side.

All of the talking so far has involved the demands of one union, Curran's CIO National Maritime Union.

The NMU demanded, in addition to a 40-hour week, wage increases of 22 cents an hour for ordinary seamen, 27 cents for able-bodied seamen, and higher amounts for skilled ratings, ranging up to 35 cents an hour.

Also the union asked for overtime payments ranging between $1.25 and $1.75 an hour, but a spokesman said that the union was more interested in cutting the work week to 40 hours than in working longer hours and receiving the overtime pay.

An ordinary seamon now gets $127.50 a month.

The union says a seaman's working time comes out to 240 hours a month if all the time is spent at sea—therefore, an ordinary seaman's hourly wage is 53 cents. The union figures that if he were raised 22 cents an hour his hourly wage would be 75 cents. And if he continued to work 240 hours, his basic monthly wage would rise to $180.30. This is assuming the demand for the 40-hour week failed and no overtime were paid.

The ship operators, most of whom are acting as agents for the Government because the War Shipping Administration still owns most of the vessels, don't accept the union's figures on hours worked.

The operators agree that the monthly wage is $127.50, but say that nearly half of the time is spent in port where a seaman works 44 hours a week instead of 56, as at sea. On that basis the operators calculate that the average of hours worked monthly is about 218.

Thus, the operators say that the present hourly wage for an ordinary seaman is around 66 cents.

Usually Are Laid Off

The union says the calculation should be based only on the working hours at sea because seamen usually are laid off when ships are in port, and the men actually get little of the shorter hours.

To that the operators reply that men are not laid off when ships are in foreign ports—only when a voyage is terminated.

The operators say that if seamen actually worked only 40 hours, additional quarters would have to be provided on the ships to accommodate more men, and that the whole thing is "impossible."

Therefore, they said, if a 40-hour week were accepted for base pay purposes, the seamen would still have to work 56 hours and overtime would have to be paid.

The operators say that if an ordinary seaman received a basic increase of 22 cents an hour, plus overtime for the 16 hours a week which he would work over 40, his weekly wage would be almost doubled.

Vote Ship Strike Support

Detroit, June 2 (AP).—The 1000 delegates to the National Negro Congress voted today to rally "full Negro support" for the proposed maritime strike June 15, to form a Negro Political Action group and to move the Congress' national headquarters from New York to Detroit.

Revels Cayton of New York, who was reelected executive vice president at the concluding session today, told the convention, "President Truman's actions recently have been extremely disappointing. They are forcing Negroes to consider trends towards a third party."

Non-Union Crew Moves Ship

Detroit, June 2 (AP).—A non-union operating crew brought the rubble-strewn Canada Steamship Lines cruise ship Noronic into port here this morning.

The Noronic ran the blockade of striking members of the Canadian seamen's union at Port Colborne, Ontario, with 200 Royal Canadian Mounted Police and provincial police lining the Welland Canal as the ship left. Six other ships were standing off Port Colborne, ready to sail.

Canadian government officials were continuing their attempts to settle the strike, which began May 25 in a dispue over hours. The seamen seek reduction of the 12-hour day to an 8-hour day.

Russian Papers Hit U. S. World Policies

Army Ready, Too

Soviets Give Atom Study Top Priority

By Daniel De Luce

Nuernberg, Germany, June 2 (AP).—A high Allied military source said today that Russia has six million men under arms at present but is preparing to reduce her forces to a long-range level of 4,500,000.

The Soviet, the source added, has released more than 10 million troops from military service in the last 10 months. The top age of conscripted classes was trimmed 26 years—from 55 to 29.

The Red army at present has a strength of 4,500,000, while an additional 1,500,000 are in the air force, navy and N.K.V.D. (internal police), the source declared, adding that the Red army alone, on a long-term basis, is expected to have a standing strength of three million, excluding reservists.

Atomic Research Pressed

The highest priority in Russia at present is given to atomic development, he said, and scientific knowledge and technical resources have been placed under tremendous pressure in an attempt to catch up with the United States-Canada-Britain atomic combine.

Allied emissaries in Moscow do not doubt that Russian scientists know the essentials of atomic-bomb manufacture. They do not expect, however, that Soviet plants will be making a finished product before 1948 or later.

The Red army is rated as the most powerful ground force in the world. It can expand quicker than Western armies in an emergency. It has offered special inducements to veteran noncoms to reenlist and thereby assured the basic coordination of the army despite demobilization.

The Soviet high command has separated strategic planning from purely command functions. Marshal Alexander M. Vasilevsky, top of the professional military hierarchy, heads the planning. Marshal Alexei Antonov is responsible for the combined command of the three services. Marshal George Zhukov is in direct command of the Red army.

There is no sign of a "marshals' clique" in the upper crust of the Communist Party. Between army and nonarmy men, as such, there is no split. But divergencies are wide between civilian "nationalists" and "cooperationists."

Maxim Litvinov and Ivan Maisky, versed for years in Western diplomacy, were the most vocal "cooperationists." Their voices have been muffled.

The "nationalists" are led by Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov.

Anti-British propaganda is open in Russia. Anti-American propaganda is neither so sharp nor so continuous. But the vast outpouring of friendship that Americans felt when Moscow celebrated VE-Day a year ago has largely disappeared.

The Russians now produce what they call the "villis"—the jeep to us. They make the biggest tank in the world—the super-Stalin, with a 130-millimeter gun. The sounds of jet-propelled planes can be heard outside the guarded area of Moscow's principal airport.

Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith's appointment as American Ambassador contained military implications that were not lost on the Soviet government.

Mutual Rebuffs Noted

The first impression he created was considered favorable. When he handed his credentials to Nokolai Shvernik of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, Smith eloquently declared that America had no hostile intentions toward her wartime ally and wanted to do everything possible to remove suspicion from their relations.

Only one Soviet general officer, however, attended the formal reception at the American Embassy on United States Army Day. All leading Soviet military figures had been invited.

The highest-ranking American officers in Moscow later on were absent at the May Day parade in Red Square.

If Russia moves aggressively, it is expected to be chiefly in the direction of the Persian Gulf, the informant said. There lie the biggest spoils in oil and strategic position. There the British and Americans seem as yet to have formulated no policy of common action. On the flank are Germany, the Balkans and Turkey—the flank is very sensitive.

It is within the possibilities of power politics for Russia, if cool and patient enough, to reach the Persian Gulf without an armed clash, the source said.

Major Attack Made on Byrnes; Vandenberg And Clay Also Flayed

Moscow, June 2 (U.P.).—Authoritative Russian publications made sweeping attacks today on United States policies all over the world with the major attack loosed on Secretary of State James F. Byrnes.

The official Government newspaper Izvestia used six columns, about one-fourth of its space, to attack Byrnes, Senator Arthur R. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who accompanied him to the Paris Conference, and Lieut. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American deputy commander in Europe, who recently stopped reparations to Russia and other countries from the American zone in Germany.

(Moscow radio broadcasts recorded in London included attacks on the United States by its own commentators and quoted attacks from such publications as Pravda, of the Communist Party, and Trud, of the trade unions. London called the blast almost unparalleled.)

Izvestia Hits Byrnes

One Izvestia attack criticized Byrnes' reply to a statement by Foreign Commissar Viacheslav Molotov on the Paris Conference. A three-column political review damned Byrnes, Vandenberg and Clay for the reparations cancellation.

Tass quoted attacks by "American personalities" on Mr. Truman. The "personalities" included radio commentator Johannes Steel, and former Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

The Political Review denounced Byrne's Paris policies without qualification and defended Molotov without reservation.

The magazine New Times in various articles:

1. Thundered editorially against the alleged "Anglo-American bloc" and denounced British Laborite leaders "who are faithfully serving Churchill's imperialistic policies."

2. Charged the United States and Britain with requisitioning Italian industries which could be put into production if the Allies permitted imports of raw materials and granted "normal" credits.

3. Praised the revival of trade unions in the Russian zone in Germany and attacked America and Britain for restraining development of unions in their zones.

4. Charged the United States with taking active part in the Chinese civil war.

5. Alleged that the Anglo-American commission report on Palestine was intended to frustrate the national aspirations of Arabs and Jews and preserve the colonial system.

Iran Issue Stressed

6. Attacked the United States and Britain on Iran.

7. Charged that the United States was employing a "strategy of starvation" in stopping the Polish loan.

8. Attacked British policy in Egypt.

9. Alleged that the British plan for Indian independence only aimed at dividing Indians and weakening their national aspirations.

10. Called the Canadian "Musk Ox" expedition across northern Canada a military, not a scientific, expedition.

[The Associated Press reported that Prof. E. Korovin, writing in Trud, said Byrnes' proposal to place disputed peace treaties before the U. N. Assembly would mean nothing more than "a veiled return" to a proposal of former President Herbert Hoover which would authorize the U. N. to "reconsider burdensome and unacceptable treaties." Referring to Hoover as "one of the reactionary figures in the United States," the commentator said his proposal could be interpreted to include Soviet treaties with the Allies and other countries.—Editor's note.]

British Women's Spinsterhood Fear Held Groundless

London, June 2 (U.P.).—Dr. Davis Mace, secretary of the Marriage Guidance Council, assured Britain's marriageable women today that only a few of them were statistically confronted by spinsterhood.

With 1,750,000 more women than men in Britain, Dr. Mace announced that he wanted to correct the "fallacious impression that there are thousands of women who will never have the chance to marry."

"In actual fact, there is an enormous preponderance of women in the 50 to 60 age group, surplus after the 1914-1918 war . . . in terms of competition in the marriage market they hardly exist," Dr. Mace reported.

Eliminating this group, he estimated that only 150,000 women were surplus. Of these, he estimated, about 100,000 have married empire, American or foreign servicemen, leaving only some 50,000 eligibles.

"Every girl in her early 20s has a very good prospect of marriage," Dr. Mace said.

Egyptian Temple, 3000 Years Old, Is Uncovered

Cairo, June 2 (AP).—A temple to the Egyptian god Thoth—believed built 3000 years ago by Rameses II and used through the Roman Emperor Nero's time—has been uncovered in excavations 60 miles south of Cairo, it was announced today.

Dr. Abel Monem Abou Bakr, antiquities professor at Farouk I University, said there was evidence that Nero visited the temple and worshiped there. Nero's name was found in the temple and a painting on the walls depicts Nero presenting gifts to Thoth, he added:

Several huge statues were uncovered, including an exceptionally well-done head of a statue which Dr. Bakr believes was of Rameses.

Yugoslavs Ban U. S. Officer's Return to State

Belgrade, June 2 (AP).—A United States Embassy official said today that United States Army Maj. Richard Coombs had been declared "persona non grata" by the Yugoslav government because he attempted to intervene in the arrest of a Yugoslav who made antigovernment remarks at an American Memorial Day service Thursday.

Coombs, graves registration officer assigned to Belgrade, left Friday on a honeymoon trip to Italy, and embassy sources said the Yugoslav action was tantamount to forbidding his return to Yugoslavia.

George Nikolic, the arrested Yugoslav, was detained after a United States Memorial Day ceremony at the graves of fallen American soldiers in Belgrade. Nikolic, the newspaper Borba said, "in a loud voice and in a vulgar way cursed out the present regime of Yugoslavia."

The newspaper added Coombs, "in a very rude and unlawful form, tried to intervene for Nikolic . . . to shock all spectators . . . his sarcastic tone, he shouted, 'this is liberty for you, Tito. Heil Hitler!'"

Borba also said that United States Army Chaplain William R. S. Donaghy of Lowell, Mass., had "misused the hospitality of Yugoslavia" by reading to the Memorial Day crowd a letter from an unnamed Yugoslav woman. The newspaper said that the woman's charge that the "people do not have the means of showing their gratefulness to the fallen aviators is without basis."

Antonescu Execution Called 'A Butchery'

Bucharest, June 1 (Delayed) (AP).—An eye-witness to the execution today of Marshal Ion Antonescu, premier of Romania during the Nazi occupation and three members of his puppet government, described it as "a butchery."

The witness, who declined use of his name, said Ion Antonescu and Gen. Vasiliu, former cabinet official, both crawled on their hands and knees after the first volley, and Antonescu shouted: "Kill me! You haven't hit me." The unnerved police, he said, then expended 11 shots at close quarters, killing the men.

U. S. Experts to Inspect Fushun Coal Mines

Mukden, June 2 (U.P.).—A team of six American technical experts will travel by train to Fushun tomorrow to inspect the major coal mines there as a part of U. S. Reparations Commissioner Edwin W. Pauley's inspection mission to Korea and Manchuria.

Pauley has been delayed in Korea longer than he originally planned, reportedly because of difficulties with the Russians, but he is expected to arrive in Mukden within two days.

Mumbling Suspect's Mouth Yields Watch

Seattle, June 2 (U.P.).—Police scratched their heads in bewilderment here at the incoherent mumbling of a 30-year-old Negro suspect being questioned in connection with a Seattle robbery.

The suspect, a janitor, refused to speak normally, holding his teeth clenched. Police investigated more thoroughly.

In the mouth of the double-talking Grillee was a woman's watch, set with six expensive diamonds.

Potato Alcohol

Distillers Call In Spud as Sub for Grain

By the United Press

The common potato may come to the rescue of the Nation's liquor drinkers who are faced with a drought because of the grain shortage.

Distillers have put in big bids for the large surplus of potatoes expected this year and will use "potato alcohol" in blends and other drinks, William Case of the Agriculture Department fruits and vegetables branch, said last night.

The Government, he said, will decide soon whether the liquor industry or "more essential" users will get the spuds. And he suggested that if the potatoes are used for beverages, "there is a chance that it may change the drinking habits of Americans" and make popular such potato drinks as vodka.

Potato alcohol can be used to stretch whisky supplies by serving as the "neutral spirits" in blends, and whisky could be made entirely from potatoes except that the law defines whisky as a product of fermented mash of grain, he said.

Potatoes are also fine in gins and cordials, according to Case.

If spuds go to the distillers, they will be lower grades—and small, odd-shaped ones, "which are just as good for alcohol, but not for eating."

Experts anticipate a large potato surplus this year, and under the price-support program, the Government will buy and then resell them.

The Agriculture Department has announced that it will continue its ban on use of grain to make whisky and beer until the summer of 1947.

German Police Break Up Anti-Allies Protest

Berlin, June 2 (INS).—German police dispersed a mob of 400 rioters today in the courtyard of the palace theater where they had assembled to protest against low food rations, inadequate living quarters and their treatment in general.

Several speakers criticized the Western Allies for permitting "a revival of Nazism" and afterward the crowd sang the Internationale and shouted demands for "a Red front."

Soviet Article Belittles U. S. Aid to Hungry

Moscow, June 2 (AP).—The magazine New Times commented on the world tour of Herbert Hoover today and declared that measures so far taken have not relieved world hunger.

"Many-worded assurances were made, pompous resolutions were adopted and an international organization with huge apparatus was formed," the magazine said, "but neither resolutions nor promises nor the world trip up to now had fed the hungering."

[Russia has consistently refused to join the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.—Post Editor's Note.]

The same article touched upon the withholding of American credit to Poland and said this was part of a "strategy of hunger."

The U. S. State Depatrment gave many reasons for holding up the credit, but, New Times declared, the real reason was given by the New York newspaper PM which was quoted as saying that the United States was "using loans for exerting imperialistic pressure."

(The United States suspended a 90-million-dollar credit to Poland on the grounds that the Polish Government censored outgoing news dispatches and withheld from the Polish people the political freedom pledges that were made by Poland as a condition to obtaining the credit.)

Jap Hunger Deaths Rise

Tokyo (Monday), June 3 (AP).—Intelligence reports indicate "an increasing number" of Japanese are dying in the Tokyo area from starvation and malnutrition, United States Army officers said today.

There had been no previous reports of deaths by starvation.

They said 267 bodies were found on streets here during April. Japanese police reported 1291 deaths from malnutrition in the Tokyo area since November.

Gen. Marshall Proposes New Armistice Plan

Nanking, June 2 (AP).—General Marshall was reported today to have proposed a new compromise armistice in Manchuria, but well-placed Chinese quarters said that while it was "workable," the prospects of longtime peace were slim.

The Marshall plan was said to provide abandonment of the Chinese government's drive to capture Harbin and Tsitsihar on condition that the Chinese Communists evacuate those cities and turn them over to administrators pending choice of new local officials representing both factions.

Nationalists March North

The government Central news agency, however, reported national troops still were advancing steadily northward from Changchun. Reports had national troops from three miles to 70 miles from Harbin.

A Chinese source described Marshall as "determined to persuade Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek not to take Harbin by force."

This source added that if the Government insists on capturing Harbin "there can be only one result—full-scale civil war."

The informant expressed the belief that chances of a permanent peace settlement were "very small."

The Generalissimo and Madame Chiang, who arrived at Peiping Thursday after a seven-day stay in Manchuria, were preparing to fly to Nanking Monday.

Chiang Gives Secret Talk

Chiang addressed a Sunday gathering of high military and administrative officials of the Government Party behind closed doors. American and Chinese newsmen who came to report the speech were compelled to leave the hall.

The Central News agency reported that Anshan, important steel center south of Mukden, had been recaptured from the Communists. Central News also claimed seizure of Tangkangtze, eight miles south of Anshan, by National troops.

Leftist Paper Charges British Still Maintain Troops in Iran

Tehran, June 2 (U.P.).—The Leftist Tudeh Party newspaper Rahbar charged today that British troops were still in Iran, and began agitating for Iran to lay the matter before the United Nations Security Council.

The British are still occupying Bushire and Bahrein and operating military and wireless installations from Zahedan, Rahbar said.

"This is especially aggravating in view of the fact that British Imperialists did their best to expel the Russians while they continued shamelessly to operate militarily in Iran even after their embassy's declaration that Iran was evacuated completely by British troops."

Iran Pact Reported

London, June 2 (AP).—The Exchange Telegraph Agency quoted the Swiss Radio tonight as saying the central government of Iran and the Separatists of Azerbaijan had reached an agreement in negotiations over the self-proclaimed autonomy of the province.

Reuters, in a dispatch from Tehran, quoted an Iranian government official as saying government troops in Kurdistan had been attacked by Kurds and "Democrats."

Divers to Search Bay For Lost Army Plane

Salerno, Italy, June 2 (INS).—Deep-sea divers will search the depths of Amalfi Bay tomorrow for wreckage of the U. S. Army transport plane which crashed yesterday with a reported loss of 30 lives.

Army Transport Command officials denied reports that high-ranking Army personnel were aboard the plane which was en route to the United States from the China-Burma-India theater when it crashed.

HELP
It is hard for us to grasp the horror of famine, for few of us fortunately have known the pangs of desperate hunger. And in the casual acceptance of our plenty it is so easy to forget that millions are starving. Lives depend upon our thoughtful use of food. Partake of the more plentiful foods; use wheat and fat products sparingly.

Confederate Memorial Rites Recall Glamour of Old South

The Old South of chivalry and valor was affectionately recalled by hundreds of Washingtonians for a few brief hours yesterday.

The flashback came to proud descendants of Confederate folk and one lone survivor of the Civil War—a century old—who pilgrimaged to Arlington National Cemetery for services marking Confederate Memorial Day.

With full hearts, they stood at the foot of the impressive Confederate Monument—overlooking a wide field of small marble slabs.

Wreaths Placed

They saw representatives of the current Commander in Chief of a united country and of several organizations representing descendants of Confederate Army veterans lay wreaths on the towering monument's base.

One hundred-year-old Gen. Julius F. Howell, past national commander of the United Confederate Veterans, paid tribute to Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, to mark the 138th anniversary of his birth.

Four young descendants of Southern leaders cast flowers on the ground near the monument.

A guard of honor from Fort Myer, Va., stood at attention. Intermittently, the United States Marine Band played stirring music.

Dr. Wingfield Speaks

Later, the delegation gathered at the Arlington Amphitheater, where the chief address was given by Dr. Marshall Wingfield, a former commander in chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

He began by championing the Confederate cause, alluding to alleged flaws in Northern thinking and discussing various views on slavery. But, in concluding, said he:

"As the victories of Pompey and Caesar were the common renown of Rome, so the valor of both North and South are the common renown of America.

"As the red rose and the white are now entwined in British history, so the Blue and Gray are now blended into the fabric of American history."

Then the band played the South's beloved "Dixie." Rebel yells resounded through the broad amphitheater. Throats tightened.

Shortly afterward some 500 Americans went home . . . to wait another year and a new resurgence of memories.

Timid Tribute . . .

OPA Comes Up for Final Tests This Week Before Senate Unit

By the Associated Press

OPA, none too hopefully, comes up against final tests this week in the Senate Banking Committee which shortly must report its version of price control extension legislation.

With the power of the pricing agency on a shaky basis in Congress, a union protest was heard against allowing prices to increase on the heels of increased wages.

President Walter P. Reuther of the CIO United Auto Workers in a radio speech from Detroit Saturday night cited recent automobile price hikes allowed by OPA after pay increases had been negotiated. He said that trend led toward "economic disaster."

Pressure Cited

Reuther did not blame OPA too much, he said, for "we know how big industries have pressured OPA both directly and through its political agents in Congress."

The Banking Committee, already having taken heavy cuts out of the price control bill, will have it up again tomorrow. Chairman Wagner (D., N. Y.) said he hoped to get all controverted points decided at that time. Several other members said they did not believe that would be possible.

The legislation as it stands in the Senate calls for extension of modified price control for a year past June 30, when it will otherwise expire. The House passed a nine-months extension in such form that Administration officials said it weakened the fight on inflation.

Rough Road Predicted

The Senate itself is slated to act on the legislation after the draft extension measure is out of the way. Some members think OPA will find the going even rougher in the Senate than in the committee.

Wagner said an attempt would be made tomorrow to overturn the committee's action in ordering price controls off meat and dairy products June 30. Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) said he saw no chance of such a reversal.

The Senate committee proposes to end subsidies (except on copper, lead, zinc and rubber) May 1, 1947, allowing $1,100,000,000 for them in the meantime. OPA asked $1,700,000,000 for food subsidies alone, and the right to pay them a full 12 months.

Report Reds Ask MP Punished Unconfirmed

Rome, June 2 (AP).—A Moscow report that the Russian Ambassador to Italy had demanded punishment of an American military policeman who struck a Russian diplomatic courier at Ciampino airport last week was without confirmation in Allied quarters today.

Lieut. Gen. Sir William D. Morgan, Allied supreme commander with whom the Ambassador was reported to have lodged the protest, said, "I have not heard of it."

STORM

down at 2238 39th st. nw. Georgetown was littered with broken limbs and half a dozen trees were uprooted.

Three unoccupied automobiles were wrecked by the storm, two when a two-car garage collapsed in Alexandria, the third when a tree fell on it in Silver Hill, Prince Georges County, Md.

A huge Elm tree smashed in the roof of the porch and the chimney was blown off the home of K. V. Nalls of 2707 Mount Vernon ave., Alexandria.

Nalls said he noticed a "peculiar" white cloud approaching his house about 9:30 a. m. from the southwest. Hardly before he could get in the house, Nalls said, there was a "horrible roar that seemed to last about four minutes."

Automobiles owned by Clyde Hampton and W. M. Moore of 104-106 E. Randolph st., Alexandria, were smashed when their two-car garage was blown down.

An empty garage owned by R. A. Windsor of 2803 Mount Vernon ave. was smashed. Storm damage in Alexandria was restricted to a small area. A nursery school frame building across from Nalls' home was undamaged.

The tree which smashed the automobile owned by William E. Latimer of Silver Hill also tore away a portion of the porch of his house.

A few yards away the wind ripped the roof of the porch of his grocery store at 4340 Branch ave., striking terror to the hearts of a group of customers waiting there for Latimer to open up.

Stanely L. Devaughs of Gordon's Corners said he and five other men piled into a parked automobile when they saw the storm approaching.

A seventh man, Norris Wilson of Allentown, couldn't squeeze into the car and found himself hanging on for dear life to a post of the store's porch as the storm struck.

"I thought the end of the world was coming," said the rain-soaked Wilson. "It was the blackest thing I ever saw."

Devaughs said the wind rolled the automobile in which he was sitting into Latimer's yard and that "we couldn't see anything but rain and limbs flying by for about three minutes."

Barns, chicken coops and stables were up-ended throughout the Silver Hill area, but elsewhere in Maryland residents reported little more than heavy rains. Montgomery County escaped damage.

LABOR

ments of the people by forthright action, and argue that a veto of the Case bill would be interpreted widely as only a move to regain political favor with labor leaders.

On the other side, New Deal Democrats who supported the efforts of the labor leaders to stop enactment of any legislation curbing the powers of unions say the President, by a Case bill veto, could retrieve somewhat the left-of-center position he marked out for himself.

If he signs the bill, they contend that what thus far has become only a temporary breach with the majority of organized labor, is going to be hard to heal.

Truman Policy Assailed

Detroit, June 2 (AP).—Richard T. Leonard, vice president of the CIO United Auto Workers and director of its Political Action Committee, tonight assailed President Truman for his recent stand on labor legislation.

Leonard, who spoke on the UAW's weekly radio program entitled his address, "An open letter to President Truman" and declared:

"The American people are shocked beyond measure at the totally unwarranted assault you have made on the honor and integrity of the Railroad Brotherhoods and at the viciously undemocratic and antilabor legislation you have proposed for enactment by the United States Congress."

Losing Support, Clark Says

Montreal, June 2.—The Democratic Party, including its leader, President Truman, is losing the support of organized labor by disregarding what labor considers to be the welfare of the common people, Lewis J. Clark, president of the United Packinghouse Workers of America (CIO), warned bluntly in a report to the union's third international convention.

This aggressive young union, with approximately 200,000 members in the United States and Canada, opens its four-day convention in the Mount Royal Hotel here tomorrow.

Both Clark and the union's international executive board take Mr. Truman and Congress to task for recent actions.

Major Drops Fight to Live In Leper Home

Carville, La., June 2 (U.P.).—Maj. Hans Hornbostel, 65-year-old survivor of the Bataan death march, tonight gave up his fight to live in the leper colony here with his wife, who is suffering from the dread disease.

Arriving here with his wife by automobile from New Orleans after a train journey from San Francisco, the gray-haired Army major said he would abide by the ruling of health authorities that he must live outside the colony.

"I'm just going to live here quietly and be near my wife," he said resignedly. "I'll visit her as much as the rules permit. But I don't want any more publicity."

Hornbostel immediately obtained quarters in Carville. Authorities at the leper colony said the major can visit his wife a minimum of 12 hours a day.

Petrillo Studies Retaliatory Ban On Recordings

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 2 (U.P.).—James C. Petrillo, stormy czar of the American Federation of Musicians, tonight was considering a proposal that his tightly knit union members refuse to make any further recordings as a gesture of retaliation for congressional approval of the Lea or anti-Petrillo bill.

Petrillo would make no comment on the reported suggestion of a ban on recordings, but it was learned authoritatively that he was considering the move.

The AFM president held a closed session with his executive board tonight, mapping plans for his avowed "all-out" fight against "antilabor" organization, and was counting on full support from the 1400 AFM delegates arriving here for the union's annual convention, which begins tomorrow.

Vandenberg Calls For True People's Peace-Making

Detroit, June 2 (AP).—Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), calling for a "people's peace," tonight warned against any attitude in world peace efforts which would limit peacemaking to a "closed corporation of big powers."

The Senator said the Paris Conference of Foreign Ministers was a success insofar as it established an American foreign policy "which invites all our partners in the war to have a proper voice in making our common peace."

Vandenberg, speaking from Washington in a broadcast interview on a Detroit hookup, addressed an "earnest appeal" to Soviet Russia to exercise "wisdom and tolerance" in the negotiation of peace treaties.

The United States, Vandenberg said, will insist on having the "advice and counsel" of the 21 nations.

2-Year-Old Blind Boy Found With Dead Mother

Seattle, June 2 (AP).—A two-year-old blind boy was reported in critical condition today by hospital attendants after he had been found on a basement trash pile.

Neighbors who heard the child crying called police who discovered the boy's foster mother dead in an upstairs room. Officials estimated she had been dead three days.

The child was identified as Frankie Chacana and his mother as Mrs. Emanuel Chacana, 45.

Man Recovering After Shot Passes Through His Brain

Springfield, Ill., June 2 (AP).—Policemen Sam Moore and Walter Applegate answered a call and found Mason Berney, 62, lying on his bathroom floor. He had been shot in the mouth and the bullet had emerged from the top of his head.

The officers said they started to call the coroner, but just then the "corpse" raised his head. They took him to the hospital instead, and attendants said he is recovering.

Dr. H. H. Southwick said Berney's life was saved by the fact that the bullet coursed between the lobes of his brain.

Jap Leaders' Hope to Escape Trial Blasted

Tokyo, Monday, June 3 (AP).—The International War Crimes Tribunal convened today to begin the trial of 26 of the Japanese militarist clique—and promptly blasted a last-minute hope of the defendants to escape prosecution.

Without even the customery discussion in chambers, the court rejected a new petition to dismiss the 55-count Allied indictment against wartime Premier Hideki Tojo and the others. Franklin E. Warren, Tucumcari, N. Mex., defense council representing Gen. Kenji Doihara, presented the petition without argument.

Chief Justice Sir William Webb, declaring that "we do not care to hear from" Chief Prosecutor Joseph B. Keenan, immediately announced denial of the motion.

The triubnal agreed to a 10-day continuance to enable defense counsel to prepare their cases.

The court will meet again tomorrow, however, to hear a 15,000-word opening statement by Keenan.

The court also heard but did not decide on petitions asking dismissal of indictments against two other defendants barred from the courtroom by ill health—former Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka and Propagandist Shumei Okawa.

The prisoners showed much interest in the arguments. Some studied papers, and Former Foreign Minister Namoru Shigemitsu, who signed the Japanese surrender document aboard the U.S.S. Missouri, followed the court discussions with a pencil in hand.

Soviet Report Of Turk Vote Branded a Lie

Istanbul, June 2 (AP).—Anatolia, official Turkish news agency, asserted today that the Soviet radio had "beaten all records of telling lies" in reporting the recent Turkish municipal elections.

"There is no source which can inform the Russians of the bitterness that is felt when false or exaggerated news is spread regarding a friendly neighbor," Anatolia said.

"The fact that false news regarding Turkey, broadcast by the Moscow radio, is published here is the most manifest proof that not violence but freedom reigns in Turkey."

Anatolia said the Soviet radio reported only 20 per cent of the people participated in the Turkish municipal elections, whereas "in reality the proportion was 70 per cent."

"The Soviet radio says no liberty of press or other freedoms exist in Turkey," Anatolia added. "Turkey is perhaps not so free on this subject as England, America or Switzerland but possesses a freedom far superior to that existing in many countries, especially Russia."

Statler Luncheon To Launch New Chest Federation

The new Community Chest Federation for the National Capital area will be launched at an inaugural luncheon at 1 p. m. Saturday in the presidential and congressional rooms of the Statler Hotel.

Civic, business, professional and club leaders from Washington and nearby counties will attend the luncheon, which is also designed to tell the public how the new federation will operate, according to Frank R. Jelleff, federation president. A single fund drive for community chest activities here and in nearby counties will be one of the results of the new union, he explained.

Guest speakers at the luncheon included Ralph Blanchard, executive director of the National Association of Community Chests and Councils, New York, and Dean Elmer Kayser, history professor at George Washington University.

Beef Production 20% of Normal, Meat Institute Says

Chicago, June 2 (AP).—The American Meat Institute said today beef production was only about 20 per cent of normal in the week ended today, and declared:

"If the present trend continues as it has since the OPA slaughter quota system went into effect, there soon will be . . . practically no honest beef at honest prices."

Ten companies operating in every State in the Union were able to buy only 29,300 head of cattle during the past week, the institute said in a statement. This was 72 per cent less than 103,000 handled in the same week a year ago, and "only about one-fifth of the 139,500 made into beef during the same week of the more normal year of 1941."

'Carping Critics' of U.S. Army Under Attack by Eisenhower

Chicago, June 2 (U.P.)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, today bitterly attacked "carping critics" of the United States Army who ignore its achievements in World War II and "overemphasize alleged faults and weakness within it."

In an address before the twentieth annual convention of the Reserve Officers Association, he admitted that there are defects in the Army's structure but said the critic "would seemingly have us believe that we lost the war."

"We acknowledge need for correction," he said, "but the need for correction does not warrant or excuse criticism inspired either by ignorance, or even worse, an intent to discredit an instrument of the people that has, at least once in every generation, stood between those people and disaster."

He described as foolish and vicious predictions as to how and where and why the next war will be fought.

At a press conference held after the speech, Eisenhower said that anyone who discusses the possibility of another war is doing the world a disservice. Defeatist talk, he said, never produces anything constructive.

Truman Returns From Cruise

U. S. Warned To Rekindle Faith in God

Americans must rekindle religious faith if we are to escape the fate of those nations "seduced" into totalitarianism, the Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame University, warned last night.

Speaking before the graduating class of Dunbarton College of Holy Cross at commencement exercises in the college auditorium, he stressed that too many of us are trying to "get along without God."

"There is a growing disregard for the axiom that the American heritage is essentially a Christian heritage. We have forgotten our founding fathers' true appreciation of the relationship between God and His creatures. Only by revitalizing this appreciation can we escape the fate of fallen nations seduced into totalitarianism," he said.

Seventy-three students received their degrees at the commencement exercises, at which the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, presided.

Georgetown Preparatory

Twenty-two students of Georgetown Preparatory School received their diplomas at commencement exercises in the school's Chapel of Our Lady yesterday morning. The Rev. Stephen F. McNamee, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Georgetown University, delivered the commencement address.

St. Alban's School

Diplomas were awarded to 27 graduates of Saint Albans School for Boys at commencement exercises held Saturday in Washington Cathedral. The commencement address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Charles Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Church, Lafayette Square.

Chevy Chase Junior

Baccalaureate services were held for the graduating class of Chevy Chase Junior College yesterday afternoon at Chevy Chase Methodist Church. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church and new president of the Washington Ministerial Union, delivered the address. Dr. Paul F. Douglass president of American University, will speak at commencement exercises today at 10 a. m. at the church.

Howard University

The graduating class of Howard University attended baccalaureate services yesterday afternoon on the campus. The sermon was delivered by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of the university. Commencement events will continue through this week, ending Friday afternoon with awarding of diplomas at exercises on campus. Dorothy Canfield Fisher will deliver the commencement address.

Two Area Drownings Reported

William S. Taggert, 58, of 2406 4th st. ne., drowned in the Wicomico River in Charles County, Md., yesterday while on a fishing trip.

He fell from his outboard motorboat and swam to within a few feet of a life preserver thrown from another boat before drowning.

Bruce Shymansky, Charles County sheriff, said that Taggert's wife, Marrianne, and Alden L. McVey, who were with him, did not see Taggert fall from the boat. They threw him a life-cushion but were unable to start their motor to go after him.

Worked as Guard

Taggert was a guard at the British Purchasing Commission here. Besides his wife, he leaves three daughters.

An unidentified man was reported to have jumped or fallen into the Potomac River from the excursion steamer SS Potomac, returning from a midnight cruise early yesterday.

Special Officer Kenneth E. Nestor, employed by the Potomac River Lines, said he saw a man plunge into the water opposite the Naval Torpedo Station, Alexandria, at 12:10 a. m.

Harry E. Slye, 423 Oglethorpe st. nw., captain of the ship, ordered the ship stopped and a lifeboat was put over the side to make a search. No trace of the man was found.

Still Drag for Bodies

Harbor police yesterday also continued dragging the Anacostia River for the bodies of two small boys reported drowned on Friday. One of the boys is Richard F. Coles, 7, who was drowned with his brother, Herbert, 10. Herbert's body was recovered.

The second boy said to have drowned is still unidentified and no one has been reported missing who answers his description. The only witness to that drowning, Douglas Pearson, 11, of 3101 K st. se., yesterday said the boy may have escaped from the water when Douglas went to summon help.

German Girl, 19, Found Dead In U. S. Lieutenant's Quarters

Frankfurt, Germany, June 2 (AP). A 19-year-old German girl was found shot to death in the quarters of an American lieutenant at Litzingen on May 30, the United States Provost Marshal's office announced today.

The announcement, identifying the girl as Jagerug Portenreuther of Munich, said she had spent the night at Litzingen with Second Lieut. Robert Hawk, whose home address was not disclosed. She had accompanied him from Munich last April.

It was the third time within a month that a German girl was found dead in the billet of an American officer about to be redeployed. In addition, an American girl, Gertrude Knapp, was found nude and dying at the officers' quarters in Frankfurt.

The Portenreuther girl was fatally wounded by a bullet from a .45 caliber pistol.

Officers said the girl was "very much in love with Hawk and killed herself because he was going back to the United States." Regulations forbid marriage of American Army personnel to Germans.

Meanwhile, an "American Wife" at Frankfurt, in a sharp letter to "B Bag," column in Stars and Stripes, complained:

"If some of the officers who fraternize could only know how we abhor 'rubbing shoulders' with their 'shack jobs' in our local night clubs, they might confine them to their shacks."

She added some of the officers were probably "not too particular in the States, either."

"But please, fellas," she wrote, "have a little respect for your American women and your uniform. Things can't be that bad."

Fatal Shooting Admitted

Nuernberg, Germany, June 2 (AP).—The United States Army Provost Marshal here said tonight an American Negro soldier had admitted accidentally shooting to death a 19-year-old German girl as as they lay in bed in the girl's Nuernberg apartment. Her body was found in the apartment last night. The provost marshal identified the soldier as Pfc. Arthur Lee Cannell, 21, of Ponyville, Miss. Cannell told questioners that as he reached for his jacket a pistol in a pocket was discharged accidentally.

Owners Meet Here to Fight for Price Relief; U. S. Prepares to Return 1000 Small Mines

By the United Press

Government officials expect full volume soft coal production today for the first time since April 1, when the United Mine Workers (AFL) strike began.

At the same time, the Government prepared to return to private owners more than 1000 small mines not covered by the new contract under which the miners began returning to work last Friday.

Return of these pits was set for 12:01 a. m. today. They represent less than two per cent of total coal production and are not organized by the UMW. All of them were seized when President Truman took over the industry May 22.

Meanwhile, soft coal producers gathered here for a meeting today to plan a fight for price relief high enough to cover the increased labor costs of the Government-UMW contract.

Fuel Administrator J. A. Krug predicted a 25-cent-a-ton price boost for consumers. Industry spokesmen said this would be insufficient and claim that 75 cents a ton will not cover the higher costs for some operators.

Operator representatives will seek conferences with Krug and Economic Stabilization Director Chester Bowles to discuss the price problem. The Office of Price Administration has issued an order that producers may charge the higher prices for all coal produced since the start of the UMW truce May 13.

Industry sources said the price relief question is probably the biggest obstacle to an early return of the mines to their owners. They predicted that many mines would be forced to close because the boost necessary to cover the new labor costs would drive their product out of the competitive fuel market.

Meanwhile, Lewis went to New York to join negotiations for a contract in the anthracite fields which would settle the strike begun by 76,000 UMW members last Wednesday.

Mine Foremen Seek Contract

Pittsburgh, June 2 (AP).—John McAlpine, president of the Supervisory Employes Union, District 50, an affiliate of the United Mine Workers, announced tonight his union would seek a Government contract covering between 65,000 and 75,000 supervisory workers in the Nation's soft coal mines.

Unless a contract is obtained, workers would not work when the mines are returned to private ownership.

Recruitment Held 'Bungled' By Army, Navy

By the Associated Press

Senator George (D., Ga.) said yesterday that the Army and Navy "bungled" by attempting to maintain both the draft and voluntary recruitment.

Nevertheless, the Georgian, one of the Senate's most influential members said he might go along with Administration sentiment for extension of the draft, including teen-agers, until May 15 of next year.

Thus he sided with a bipartisan move toward a program that would combine draft extension with generous pay raises for both enlisted men and officers to encourage voluntary recruitment.

George said he was certain "all the men needed by the armed forces could be raised through the traditional American volunteer system."

Majority Leader Barkley (D., Ky.) and Senator Hill (D., Ala.) joined with Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.) in predicting Senate approval of the draft extension bill together with generous pay increases.

Through an unusual line-up within the Senate Military Committee, Gurney, a Republican, will act as floor leader for the draft bill in the Senate today. Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah), who originally opposed peacetime conscription, expected to be away from the Senate.

At present Selective Service is operating under a stop-gap extension from last May 14 until July 1, exempting 18 and 19-year-olds from induction.

There were advance indications that several Senators, including Wherry (R., Nebr.), Republican whip, and Revercomb (R., W. Va.), would oppose any extension beyond the end of this month.

Congress Tips Scale to Capital, Pepper Says

Congress is "tipping the scale" on the side of big business, Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) charged yesterday.

He said legislators have provided greater benefits for capitalist and management interests, which he dubbed the "big fellows," and less "for the little fellows," or labor.

At the same time, he contended, in an interview by Ed Hart over Radio Station WINX, that Congress is not doing the job necessary to eliminate "labor-industry turmoil."

Congress Blamed

While placing responsibility for recent strikes on management and labor as well as Government, Senator Pepper heaped greatest blame in the lap of Congress.

Government failure to map an adequate reconversion policy was held a chief reason for industrial unrest.

The Government knew, he said, that if it didn't "hold down prices" at a time when pay envelopes were being reduced, workers would fight for higher wages.

Employers Fail to Bargain

Of employer interests, the Florida legislator had this to say: "Management failed to bargain collectively on wages."

The attitude was fostered by a desire to "break the power of labor," Pepper asserted resulting from the fear labor was out to alter current industrial procedures.

Admitting labor, too, has not been blameless, the Senator stated certain "abuses" have occurred. "There is abuse on both the part of management and labor," he said.

Likening recent major industrial disputes to "a thundershower on a hot summer day," the Senator predicted, however, the Nation is "about ready to enter an era of industrial peace."

Socialists Favor Third Party on National Scale

Chicago, June 2 (AP).—The national convention of the Socialist Party today indorsed development "on a Nation-wide scale" of a new political party after an appeal in favor of the resolution by Norman Thomas, New York, perenniel presidential candidate.

The resolution, adopted 71 to 43, stated that plans for such a third party, "must be consistent with its growing devotion to democratic socialism," and "the party must be completely independent of the two old parties, and Fascist and Communist totalitarian groups must be excluded from its formation."

National Socialist Committee members reelected include Al Hamilton of Washington, D. C.

"Young woman must first have an interview with his mother, and if accepted must pay all her expenses. Marriage could be arranged when mother dies."

George Bill

Senator Walter George has introduced a bill to rectify a lamentable hardship which the Social Security Act imposes upon veterans. The law provides that the survivors of an insured person may not receive benefits in case of his death unless he was employed and making social security contributions during at least 6 out of the last 12 quarter years of his life. This is a sensible provision designed to prevent anyone not covered by the social security program from taking an eleventh-hour advantage of it. But to men who left a covered job to join the armed services and consequently ceased to make social security contributions, this means a total loss of status or protection for at least a year and a half after their discharge. The survivors of such veterans would receive no benefits in case they died as a result of some nonservice-connected disability or accident, simply because they had been unable to make the requisite contributions during their service years.

The remedy proposed by Senator George is to treat these men as though their employment in their preservice jobs and their social security contributions had been uninterrupted. In order to avoid mountainous calculations—which at best could be mere guesswork in any case—his bill provides for an assumption that all the servicemen affected were earning $160 a month during their term in the armed forces. This is admittedly a rough rule of thumb solution, but it appears to be the most sensible one possible in the circumstances. It would afford a thoroughly justified protection for the families of veterans for a period of three years following the veterans' discharge. After that period, the veterans may be reasonably expected to acquire social security protection for their families as a result of their normal employment. We think that Senator George's bill deserves prompt enactment.

Senate's Version

We think that President Truman was unduly pessimistic in complaining that the Senate had "emasculated" his emergency strike-control bill. To be sure, the Senate made rather extensive changes. But at least one of these should make the measure more useful by lifting unnecessary odium from it. We refer to the clause which would have enabled the President to draft strikers for emergency service. We do not believe that that provision would have been invoked. It is of doubtful constitutionality and would have tended to bring the entire measure into disrepute, thus tending to discourage the application of any of its provisions. In our opinion, the Administration would be wise to consent to the elimination of this section of the bill in conference.

The Senate also eliminated the provision taking away seniority rights from workers who refuse to end their strike when the Government attempts to operate seized properties. But employes thus continuing on strike would be deprived of their jobs and lose the guarantee of reinstatement under the Wagner Act. Whether or not they would be rehired would be wholly at the discretion of the Government, while it operated the plants, or subsequently at the discretion of the employers. Here is a substantial weapon against recalcitrants striking against the Government, although it is not as drastic as the President requested.

Sharp penalties, under injunction or criminal prosecution, are also retained for officers or agents of unions conducting or permitting strikes or slowdowns to continue in plants taken over by the Government. Such officers could be required "to take appropriate affirmative action to rescind or terminate" a strike against the Government, just as employers may be required to take positive action under the National Labor Relations Act to make amends for unfair labor practices. Of course, employers or their agents refusing to halt a lockout against the Government would be subject to like punishment. It cannot be reasonably said that the bill in its present form lacks "teeth."

The weakest part of it, in our opinion, is the carte blanche given the President and his aides to "provide for the establishment from time to time of fair and just wages and other terms and conditions of employment in the affected plants, mines or facilities" during Government operation. The effect would be, as we have previously pointed out, to encourage strikes so as to force governmental seizure and open the way for Federal wage fixing. There is nothing to guide the Administration in the fixing of such wages. Even the original statement of policy that neither employers nor employes should profit from Government seizures was eliminated by the Senate.

We think no such blanket discretion should be given to the President. If Congress does not wish to require maintenance of the status quo as to wages and working conditions while a plant is in the hands of the Government, with the new contract being made retroactive, it should seek some other definite means of bringing about the desirable adjustments. It might, for example, require compulsory arbitration in such cases, as the Burton-Ball-Hatch bill contemplated. Or it might require the parties to accept the proposals of a fact-finding board. Certainly the problem should not be dumped into the lap of the President for him to deal with as he may see fit.

Curb On Reparations

The suspension of reparations from the United States zone in Germany is a consequence of the failure to deal with Germany as an economic whole in accordance with the terms of the Potsdam agreement. No doubt General Clay's purpose in effecting the suspension is to put pressure upon the Russians who have blocked the adoption of a common policy with respect to German external trade. In the absence of such a common policy, it is impossible to set up any system of internal trade for the exchange of food and raw materials—for the obvious reason that the surpluses, if any, of each zone have to be used first for export abroad to pay for essential imports. And the effect of this, so far as the United States zone is concerned, is to leave it absolutely dependent upon food imports from this country—which we are supplying now to the tune of about 180 million dollars a year.

The Russians acknowledge that the Potsdam agreement requires the adoption of a common policy governing exports and imports. They have declared, however, that this is not the proper time to implement this particular phase of the agreement. What General Clay has done, in effect, is simply to say, "Then this is not the proper time to implement the Potsdam provisions on reparations either." His position is not merely one of reprisal or of tough bargaining. The reparations guaranteed to Russia at Potsdam were guaranteed on the assumption that Germany, by the target year 1949, would achieve a level of exports adequate to pay for her necessary imports. If this assumption is not to be realized—and it cannot be realized without a common policy on foreign trade—then General Clay can scarcely afford to give the Russians industrial equipment out of the zone he governs while continuing to spend the money of American taxpayers in the zone's support.

It is greatly to be hoped that General Clay's move will bring the Russians around to acceptance of a general policy on foreign trade. For if it does not, the result is likely to be not only a complete breakdown of the Potsdam agreement but a breakdown of the whole quadripartite control arrangement as well. This would mean, probably, that the Americans, British and French would have to consolidate their three zones economically, leaving the Russian zone to operate as a separate economic entity. A line would be drawn, in other words, through the center of Germany—and, indeed, through the center of Europe—with the Russians exercising control of everything to the east, the British, French and Americans of everything to the west.

This would be a tragic frontier, a tragic impasse, a tragic end to the hopes of Allied postwar cooperation. General Clay has acted not to bring about this end but if possible to prevent it by making clear to the Russians the implications of their intransigeance. The unhappy fact is that the present ambiguous situation cannot long continue. We cannot go on managing our zone on the assumption of an economic unity which is nonexistent. We must realize the unity Potsdam proclaimed—or else we must proceed in accordance with the reality that it cannot be realized. The acid test of Soviet-American cooperation lies precisely here.

Reaction To Bigness

President Truman was in a nostalgic mood when he addressed the graduates of Washington College at Chestertown on Maryland's Eastern Shore on Saturday. The atmosphere of an institution graduating only 24 students aroused in his heart a resurgent love for the small town and the decentralized mode of living. Small colleges, small business and small communities thus monopolized his eulogies. The President apparently thinks that we should be happier if business, industry, education and government were divided into smaller units, and we suspect that his feeling is shared by a great many of his fellow citizens.

It is not to be supposed, however, that the President was hinting at a new policy for his Administration to follow. He well knows that in such matters the wish is not father to the actuality. Undoubtedly the President's affection for small institutions had been greatly stimulated by his recent struggles with gigantic labor unions powerful enough to challenge the authority of the Government. But he is not one who would expect his yearnings or his preferences to change the facts of our modern society. The blunt truth is that bigness in now characteristic of the United States. One of the facts of which we can be reasonably certain in the years ahead is that our lives will be profoundly affected by big business, big labor, big educational institutions, big lobbies and big government. At present there seems to be no escape from these kinds of bigness.

While longing for the simple life in a self-contained community, therefore, the President knows that he must struggle with stupendous national forces in a complex society. The recent indications that he intends to throw into this struggle courage and strength enough to protect the public interest is a most encouraging development. Mr. Truman will not be asked to accomplish the impossible by taking the country back to any simpler form of economic system. But his Administration is likely to be judged by its success or failure in projecting some of the disciplines and stability of our horse-and-buggy days into the complicated economic system we are now building.

General Strikes

A general strike in Rochester, N. Y., which seriously crippled the life of that city for approximately 24 hours last week, ended with what appears to have been a complete victory for the unions. One hundred and seventeen locals, including CIO and AFL affiliates and two independent unions, joined in the strike, which was precipitated by the refusal of the city officials to recognize the organizations of municipal employes. The gas, power, light and telephone services were not involved, and deliveries of milk and bread were permitted; but the transportation was completely paralyzed, since not only trolley and auto bus workers but also taxi drivers stopped work. There were no newspapers because of the refusal of the Newspaper Guild members to cross the picket lines.

This was the first general strike of any importance since the one in San Francisco almost a dozen years ago in support of the longshoremen, called off after three days without accomplishing its purpose. Since then the general strike as a weapon in labor disputes has been held by many to be anachronistic. Not many general strikes have been successful. There is always danger of sporadic violence which may get out of hand and thus afford the pretext for violent measures of repression. Besides, it has been observed that nearly all the coercive power inherent in the general strike can be exerted merely by the stoppage of work in one or two cardinal industries, as in the recent tugboat strike in New York.

The most memorable general strike was that which occurred in Seattle about six months after the end of World War I in support of the metal trades workers in the Puget Sound shipyards. After four days, however, several of the unions voted to return to work and on the fifth day the strike was formally ended. Meanwhile, the Mayor of Seattle, Mr. Ole Hanson, startled the country by announcing that the real purpose of the strike was to start a revolution. A good many radical journalists and agitators believed him, for they had already persuaded themselves of the imminence of a world revolution. Many of the propertied classes also believed him, for they had been thoroughly frightened by the example of Bolshevist Russia. Thus the principal result of the Seattle strike was to feed the anti-Red hysteria, which reached its climax the following year in the grandiose arrests and deportations ordered by Attorney General Palmer and continued with some diminution through most of the 1920s.

Nevertheless, the Seattle strike, like the recent one in Rochester, was unaccompanied by violence. This was not the case in the general strike in Philadelphia in 1910 in support of the transit workers. That strike continued for 21 days and is said at one time to have involved 150,000 workers. It was called off when the transit workers refused to accept the terms of a settlement proposed by mediators.

The controversy at Rochester has some points of similarity with the Boston police strike in the summer of 1919, which first brought the late Calvin Coolidge to national attention. For many years the Boston policemen had maintained a social organization and when its members, forced to live on salaries fixed by law, found themselves victims of the rising inflation, this club was the vehicle of their demands for an increase in pay. Failing to obtain it, they proposed affiliation with the AFL, which the mayor and police commissioner forbade. The police voted to strike. The mayor called for volunteers to replace them and ordered out the Boston companies of the National Guard. A general strike in support of the policemen was proposed and for a time appeared probable. The Central Union called for a ballot, but only one trades union group actually voted in favor of a general strike. By the end of the fourth day, when Mr. Coolidge issued his famous appeal to the Secretary of War, it was already obvious that the police strike had been broken. The net result was a lockout of the strikers and the recruitment of a new force.

WHO CAN MAKE THESE RIGID LINES?

Who can make these rigid lines
Dividing right from wrong,
Dividing love from lust, dividing
Laughter from song—
Who can make these fine distinctions
When even the peacock's back
Has blue that's green and green that's blue
And violet that's black?
In every nation there is room
For wise men but we may
Look just as well upon the moon
Or hunt them in the hay, my dear,
Or hunt them in the hay.

Washington Democracy

Washington has strength and beauty. Its Government buildings, avenues and public parks speak for themselves. Yet when we ask ourselves if Washington is a truly democratic city, if it reflects the ideals of Washington, Lincoln or Roosevelt, we can hardly answer in the affirmative.

First and most obviously, our residents do not have the opportunity to vote. Too, Washington has failed completely to stand up for the rights and privileges of its Negro minority. They are inadequately housed; their hospital facilities are sadly lacking. Their school system is even more badly run than that of the whites. City garbage collectors are often careless about collecting refuse from Negro areas. The fact that some of the worst slums in the United States may be found within the shadow of the Capitol bespeaks a weakness and indolence from which a great democracy like the United States should never suffer.

The solution of Washington's municipal problems rests in the establishment of a democratic municipal government elected by its own citizens. The problem of self-government in the District has been raised many times by the Washington newspapers, and it has always died down. This most important question squarely faces our citizens. It is time for civic groups, community organizations, churches, individuals and the press to unite in a strong and forceful campaign to gain the fundamental rights of democracy for Washington citizens.

Filipino-Americans

On May 28 the new President and the Vice President of the Philippines were inaugurated. On July 4 theirs will be the first leadership in the Republic of the Philippines.

And yet there are a few Filipinos who, with their dependents, are counting the days until they are transformed into an alien group and hence may not be eligible to continue under civil service or pursue the professional life that they were engaged in.

All of them now are nationals of the United States. The moment the legal tie ceases the justification for their privileges will end.

Unless Congress either by a resolution or by an enabling statute gives them the privilege of becoming naturalized citizens of the United States no relief is in sight. Administrative agencies will have no room for discretion. And there is not any law that could meet their situation squarely. Are not the Chinese better off because they can be naturalized and are not the Filipinos like the Japanese who cannot be naturalized?

Freedom Of Migration

In his letter of May 25 issue Mr. Paul Haensel suggests that the freedom of migration should be proclaimed as the fifth freedom and "one of the most important human rights." He emphasizes, however, that the freedom of migration means only the right to leave his country, not the right to be admitted by a foreign country.

The limitation makes the whole proposal worthless. Every emigrant from one country is by definition an immigrant into another. Freedom of migration has to include both possibilities of emigration and immigration. "The fifth freedom" remains a paper freedom if the emigrant has not where to go. Hitler allowed the Jews to emigrate (though leaving almost all their property), but in spite of this "freedom of migration" the majority of them could not escape persecution and subsequent extermination, because they found the doors to foreign countries closed for them.

True, a recognition of the freedom of migration "does not mean that anyone may demand admittance to any other country." But it does mean that no nation should be allowed to exclude immigration bilaterally and arbitrarily. Only regulation of migration by the United Nations or some similar international organization would assure a real asylum for political refugees.

Doolittle Report

The so-called Doolittle "gripe" board, which consisted of a majority of four officers and a minority of two enlisted men, has issued its report which would have been more revealing if the board had consisted of one officer and ten enlisted men as is the proportion in the very Army the board ostensibly investigated.

Veterans who hoped that their views would be fully represented were disappointed, as is inevitable when the Army is investigated by itself. Why do potential enlisted men cross to the opposite side of the street when they approach an Army recruiting station with its tantalizing but currently ineffectual lithographed posters? The reasons are Lichfield and the all-too-true tales which discharged veterans are relating about their treatment while in the service. Military pay raises and other enticements are not compensation enough to overcome the fear of our young men under these circumstances.

Inflation Curb

During the past four years, those who watch the stock market and financial trends have seen increases of as much as 400 or 500 per cent in the price of stocks which haven't paid a dividend in years. Yet, at the same time the value of war bonds, which were sold to the American people as "the safest investment in the world," has decreased steadily in terms of purchasing power.

Surely, if the stock of some fourth-rate, debt-ridden company can be a hedge against inflation, it is not too much to ask that protection against runaway prices be offered those who patriotically put their savings in war bonds.

This protection could be easily given. One way would be a law directing the Treasury to adjust the maturity value of bonds in accordance with the rise in the price index. Thus, if you bought a $100 bond in 1943 and the price index were to rise 40 points by 1953, you would get back $140 instead of $100.

Besides being simple financial justice, this would probably be as effective an anti-inflation measure as Congress could enact. It would remove the motive, or rather, need, for the current speculative hedging against inflation being practiced by so many people today.

Actually, it is doubtful if action making war bonds inflation-proof would cost the Government anything. The measure would act as a brake on the inflationary trend and by the time the bonds mature, the price index would probably be back to at least the level it had reached at the time the bonds were purchased.

Factors In Good Labor Relations

There are successful measures by which some employers and their employes never have strikes or labor losses. No comprehensive survey or compilation of these measures has apparently ever been made for the use of other employers and employes, the Department of Labor, the President or Congress in all their labor troubles.

There are thousands of cases of labor and other disputes that are heard and satisfactorily decided every year by measures that could be applied to other labor disputes. These measures are not being applied or apparently even proposed in some of the country's worst disputes most affecting the welfare of all the people.

There are two general kinds of arbitration laws, bodies and measures: (1) those that are failures and almost never used—as is the case in many States; (2) those in New York State (and maybe elsewhere) which are successful and used more and more—and could still be improved. Most of the arbitration proposed for recent national labor disputes has been of the failing kind—and naturally opposed by both sides. The successful kind could be established and used where appropriate in labor disputes with satisfaction to both sides.

There are successful "fact finding" or other bodies in these worst disputes which are so composed that both employers and employes would learn not only to agree to their use but also to obey their decision on the disputed questions. No fact finding or other bodies in these worst disputes appear to be so composed and operating today.

There are laws and measures that furnish standards and guides for the right determination of such facts and decisions that are in successful operation in many of the country's great industries and activities that affect the public welfare. These laws and measures could be fairly and successfully established in some industries and activities that are even more important to the public.

There are successful measures by which the failures of collective bargaining can be avoided. The essence of bargaining is that neither party is compelled to accept the offer of the other; either the buyer or seller is free to deal with others. But in the coal and railroad strikes and many others, there are no "others." The mine and railroad operators can't buy labor from anybody except the unions and the miners and railroad employes can't sell to anybody except the operators. A premium is put on the side which holds out the longest. And the longer it holds out the more loss to the innocent suffering Nation. The successful measures to overcome this impossible situation have not yet been established. They could be.

Even where no organized body or method of deciding labor disputes is used there are particular successful measures and techniques that can be used by the parties or mediators or conciliators in many cases. In many published accounts of important disputes they are not used.

There are practical steps by which a body could be established which would assemble and report the facts in all the above matters and the best steps to establish these successful measures in all the chief organized labor relations of the country where they are now lacking. It could be established by Congress, the President, the Department of Labor, joint action of able leaders in labor, capital and management or certain private foundations or individuals. It could receive the support of the ablest leaders of all sides in labor relations.

Things Not Seen

CONCORD AND LIBERTY, by Jose Ortega y Gasset; translated from the Spanish by Helene Weyl. (Norton, $2.75.)

Some five or six years ago, you will recall, a collection of Senor Ortega's essays and lectures was translated and presented to American readers in a volume called Towards a Philosophy of History. Not only the title but the contents of the papers suggested that they were in the nature of notes or meditations for a much larger work in project. That work, as far as I know, has not yet appeared, either in Spanish or in English, but the five essays included in this supplementary volume make it reasonably clear that what we are to expect is not another interpretation of history in terms of a philosophy but rather another philosophical system based on the historical principle.

It is thus, apparently, that Senor Ortega plans to dispose of the vexatious epistemological problem which is at the basis of nearly all modern philosophic controversy. Epistemology means the method of determining what can be known and how we are to know it, and the problem, in its current aspects, has arisen mainly out of the attacks by writers of the positivist persuasion on the whole metaphysical edifice and their repudiation as meaningless of all knowledge that is not empirically demonstrable. This doctrine, as their opponents have been careful to point out, is itself metaphysical since it rests on an assumption which is wholly a priori. Thus even for the positivists the epistemological problem remains; but now Ortega seeks to dismiss it by transferring the whole question from the realm of knowing to that of mere believing. His position, however, is very different from that of Bishop Huet and others, known as fideists, who holding the human intellect impotent to apprehend truth by its own devices, insisted that the only path to ultimate knowledge is through faith. But Ortega, though holding faith to be a necessity of human existence, also holds that all faiths perish and that philosophy begins where belief has expired, and arises from the necessity to find a new certitude for the one that is lost. What he means by faith, or belief, is "an idea in which man abides." When this idea "fails and he has nowhere to abide, he must do something to find out anew what to make of that particular thing. Whatever he then resorts to is thinking. There is no escape from it; men cannot help striving for certainty." Thus knowing becomes merely "the attempt to solve the riddle of life by making intellectual mechanisms function in a formal way under the ultimate direction of concepts and their combinations in ratiocination."

At the same stroke Ortega seeks to demolish the ontological problem, which has to do with the nature of being. He separates being and reality, for to him the only reality is the experience of life. Thus the concept of being is merely one of the faiths necessary to any process of knowing, a faith "that behind the confusion and chaos of the world there lies concealed a fixed and stable figure on which all changes depend and which once revealed gives a clew to what happens around us." Another faith necessary to all human knowledge is that there is a congruence between human intellect and objective being. "Only when these two conditions are fulfilled does it make sense to hope that our intellect may serve to penetrate reality to the point of discovering its latent being."

The faiths or "abiding ideas" of an age or place are determined in the first instance by concrete circumstances arising in the lives of the inhabitants. Where they are accepted without question—that is, without recourse to the process of knowing—they are to be identified as tradition, which, says Senor Ortega, is a "peculiar form of sleepwalking. . . . Insofar as I live submerged in a tradition, I obey it instinctively and thus lead a life of 'pure' faith, the life of a true 'believer.'" But it seems that when a tradition no longer satisfies the concrete circumstances of history, it "sickens and dies," and then philosophy becomes a substitute for tradition and presently a tradition in itself. This is why no philosophy can be really understood apart from the historical context of the age which gave rise to it. For belief, like reality, is an endless evolutionary flux and philosophy and the history of philosophy are identical terms. Thus the true philosophy is not one that seeks to be final but one which "holds all past philosophies within itself as its vital organs, recognizing them as 'progress toward itself.'"

Having thus with his Bergsonian sword and Heraclitean buckler slain, as he hopes, the demon of the absolute, Senor Ortega gives us an example of the effect in the political order of the decay and death of a collective faith. This is in the admirable commentary on the Republic of Cicero which serves as the title piece, but might, I think, have been placed more appropriately at the end of the book. Like ourselves, Cicero was living "between the times," in an interregnum between the death of an old tradition and the creation of a new one. And, as he watched the death agonies of the Republic, he saw vividly how dependent the old Roman liberties had been on the old Roman religion, and how the popular loss of faith in the auspices, after the importation of Greek ideas, had destroyed concord of citizens and so made necessary the reign of force.

Matter Of Fact

Death-Bed Scene

IN THE GENERAL hurly-burly over labor, no one has troubled to watch by the deathbed of the Administration's price and inflation control program. It is as though an annoying but useful member of the family had tactlessly chosen to have a heart attack while the firemen were in the house. Nevertheless, the chances are that the demise of price and inflation control will shortly be officially announced, when the President returns the mangled corpse of the OPA extension bill to Congress with a sharp veto.

President Truman, whose brisk, optimistic amiability has been entirely frayed away by the experience of the past fortnight, is reported to want to veto the bill. The veto should be acrimonious, since he is understood to want the country to know where to put the blame for the expected steep price rises. Furthermore, both Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles and OPA Administrator Paul Porter are determined to resign rather than attempt to administer the kind of bill which the Senate is now almost certain to pass.

WITHOUT THESE TWO, the price and inflation control machinery will inevitably fall to pieces. Both are convinced, however, that it will fall to pieces anyway if modified in the manner planned by the Senate Republicans and conservative Democrats. Neither man is willing to stay on to try to manage a situation which they think will surely be unmanageable. And both are therefore licking their chops with anticipatory relief (for neither has enjoyed the last months), and playing the agreeable game of writing draft letters of resignation.

Porter has had several tempting offers from private business, and wants ultimately to return to the wild pleasures of Kentucky politics. Bowles would frankly like to run for Senator or Governor in Connecticut, if he can only induce the unenthusiastic Democratic machine there to give him the chance. (In this, incidentally, he will get little help from the Administration. The President has kept Bowles because he needed him, but freely talks about him with all comers in the same language that the ancient mariner must have used about his albatross.) If neither of the Connecticut nominations is tendered to Bowles, he plans a world trip in the manner of Wendell Willkie's. He is deeply concerned about the foreign situation, and wishes to study it.

THE REASONS why Bowles and Porter feel inflation control will soon become hopeless are all fairly simple. They have been fighting a rear-guard action to hold the price line ever since the steel settlement. The coal and railroad strikes have disrupted production, and made the fight ever more difficult. They believe they would still win a handsome final victory over the upward price spiral if they were given a workable OPA bill by Congress, since the first round of the labor crisis is almost over, and production should boom in the coming period of relative calm. But they are not going to be given a workable OPA bill. In fact, if present indications are not deceptive, they are hardly going to be given an OPA bill at all.

A few weeks ago, the storm of protest from the country seemed to be arousing the natural caution of Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio and the other anti-OPA leaders in the Senate. But the letters are not pouring in any longer in the same volume, and Senate tempers have been inflamed by the strike crisis. Thus amendments are now scheduled to be added to the bill which will leave almost nothing the consumer really needs in the area of effective control.

MEAT, LIVESTOCK, grains, dairy products, cotton and textiles are among the products which the Senate amendments will either decontrol altogether, or render uncontrollable by destroying essential existing control machinery. In food products, all sorts of special provisions are to be attached to the bill, to please this or that group. It is also intended to transfar the whole problem of food price control to the flaccid, unprepared hands of the Department of Agriculture. The amendments covering cotton and textiles are just as damaging—so damaging, indeed, that the sardonic Porter told a group of Senators that he hoped the bill would "remove the penalties for indecent exposure, since members of low-income groups would hardly be able to clothe themselves next year." In an unnoticed letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, the President clearly indicated that the food product amendments alone would be sufficient to induce him to veto the bill.

Predictions as to what will happen when OPA is vetoed vary very widely. No one expects the Congress, in its present mood, to take the medicine of the veto and close the session by passing the OPA bill without serious changes. Therefore it is necessary to try to figure out what the results will be if OPA goes.

Nobody doubts that there will be steep price rises. The anti-OPA thinkers argue that the price rises will be temporary, and will be canceled by expanding production. The Government experts believe, on the contrary, that the price rises will initiate a boom-and-bust cycle, complicated by tremendous new labor troubles caused by the nullification of labor's wage gains by higher living costs. From the gloomy recesses of the Federal Reserve Board come forecasts of average price increases up to 100 per cent during the boom stage, while the OPA prophets are content not to name an average but to predict rises ranging from 30 to 150 per cent. It remains to be seen who will be right.

Roosevelt And Labor

By Ernest Lindley

He Asked For Compulsory War Work

MR. HAROLD L. ICKES, as chairman of the Independent Citizens' Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, said, in attacking President Truman's emergency proposals: "President Roosevelt united the country for an all-out war against the Fascist powers. He had no such power as this bill gives President Truman. Appealing directly to the people for support of a just war and a great cause, President Roosevelt did not have to draft labor or compel workers to work at a bayonet's point to keep our factories running for victory."

Lindley

Mr. Ickes is substantially correct. But he leaves the implication that Mr. Roosevelt did not seek authority to compel workers in essential industries—which in wartime included a great many—to stick to their jobs. Mr. Roosevelt asked for this and more. He sought authority to assign able-bodied workers to particular types of work.

In June, 1943, occurred one of the coal strikes which threatened the war effort. Seeing that Mr. Roosevelt was apparently determined to break the strike, Mr. Lewis ordered the miners back to work temporarily. In commenting on the situation a few days later, Mr. Roosevelt revealed that the Government had made plans to induct into the armed services all miners who refused to work. He revealed also that he intended to request Congress to authorize inductions for noncombat service of men up to the age of 65.

Two days later, Mr. Roosevelt made this request of Congress.

IT SHOULD BE noted also that in vetoing the Smith-Connally bill, passed at that time, Mr. Roosevelt indorsed most of its provisions, including that making it a criminal offense to instigate, direct or aid a strike in a Government-seized plant. His veto was on different grounds, chiefly that the bill would legalize wartime strikes. It was overridden. But the fact that it was exercised has left the impression that Mr. Roosevelt was opposed to the entire bill, which was not the case, as can readily be verified by reference to his veto message. On the contrary, he was urging simultaneously a still stronger remedy in the event of strikes in essential industries.

In January, 1944, Mr. Roosevelt urged the enactment of a compulsory National Service Act. His conclusion that such a law would aid the war was belated, and, as he said, reluctant. It was needed, he felt, not only to curb strikes but to assure that every able-bodied person was doing the kind of work which would help most to win the war. He predicted that if the law were on the books, its compulsory features would seldom if ever have to be employed. That had been the experience in Britain, which had adopted compulsory national service in 1940, for women as well as men.

The leaders of labor called Mr. Roosevelt's proposal "Fascist." Congress spurned it and turned instead to a "work-or-fight" bill more particularly to curb strikes. Mr. Roosevelt nevertheless renewed his recommendation in his annual message to Congress of 1945.

Although our war production became prodigious and we won the war, the lack of universal service legislation and of means of curbing strikes on the part of those workers who broke the no-strike pledge are not things to boast about. They were weaknesses, which proclaimed our unwillingness to go all out on the home front, and they were recognized as such by Mr. Roosevelt. The most serious strikes, those in the coal fields, were bought off, as Mr. Ickes well knows, since he played a key role in the transactions, at a very heavy price. Those who struck with disregard of our national safety were rewarded more handsomely than those who patriotically stuck to their jobs. The after-effects of this injustice are still being felt, and were in part responsible for the rail strike, which compelled Mr. Truman to take and recommend strong action.

WE ARE NO LONGER fighting. The number of industries in which strikes may properly be held to menace the safety of the Nation is now very limited. But there are some in which general stoppages, especially if they are protracted, are unendurable at any time. The railroad industry is one of them. Coal mining is another. Shipping is still another.

When a stoppage hits directly and swiftly at the vitals of our national life, the Government has not only the right but the obligation to stop it. It has the obligation to use whatever means are necessary to end the threat to our safety. When the obligation is proclaimed and the intention understood, the resort to extreme measures will seldom, if ever, be necessary—as Mr. Roosevelt pointed out in asking for universal service in wartime. But the failure to equip the Government with all the powers might be held to signify that the Government's obligations to the Nation in a moment of crisis are limited—that it can go only so far and if that doesn't achieve the result, it's just too bad, even if the Nation collapses.

Mr. Truman's request for emergency powers, either in substance or in detail, may have violated the Roosevelt "tradition," as it is now construed by some of his former associates, but the Roosevelt record is something else.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Delegate Stettinius' Resignation

THE FOOLISH RUMORS that circulated about the reasons for the resignation of Edward R. Stettinius, jr., had him at odds with Secretary of State Byrnes. So far as can be discovered, there was no foundation whatsoever for those rumors.

Childs

Stettinius' letter of resignation was a dignified statement of his desire to step out. The President should accept it in the spirit in which it was tendered.

Thus will be ended one of the most curious chapters in the Roosevelt Administration. Stettinius was one of the little group of proteges developed under the wing of the late Harry L. Hopkins. They were almost all wealthy amateurs in government. One was Nelson Rockefeller, who became head of a Government agency to promote goodwill with Latin-America. Another was Averell Harriman, in charge of lend-lease in London, later Ambassador to Moscow and now Ambassador to London.

Hopkins' proteges were eager for advancement and prestige and ready to work hard under his tutelage. He used an interesting technique with them. Sometimes he scolded, sometimes he kidded. They were devotedly loyal to their mentor and, thanks to him, they played no small part in the history of the time.

Stettinius was first Lend-Lease Administrator, then Undersecretary and finally, on the resignation of Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. It was Hopkins who had put him on that escalator and Hopkins watched his progress upward with loving care.

IN THE NO. 2 position in the Government, Stettinius had many limitations. They were limitations of background and training. He was enormously jovial and friendly, but that did not always make up for his deficiencies. The job was a formidable one. Hopkins told him when he went in that he would have to reorganize the State Department from top to bottom. It was full of dead wood. On the other hand were able younger men who had never been given an opportunity.

Stettinius took some of the necessary steps. But he become too preoccupied with small details. He would show visitors how thoroughly the corridors and entrance hall of the gloomy State Department building had been repainted and remodeled as though that in itself would somehow let in light and leadership.

Then came Dumbarton Oaks. As host and chaperone, Stettinius did a good job. He was taking directions, of course, from the White House and in particular from his close friend and patron.

President Roosevelt's death ended an intensely personal government because so much stemmed from the mind and the personality of one man and the others who moved in his orbit.

For Stettinius, President Roosevelt's death came at a peculiarly difficult and embarrassing time. The formative meeting of the United Nations Conference was less than two weeks off. It was rumored Stettinius would resign. There were demands for his resignation.

This made his position extremely difficult. Yet when President Truman asked him to carry on for a little longer, after he had submitted his resignation, Stettinius accepted. The serious complication was the fact that with the death of the President and the accession to power of the Vice President, the Secretary of State is next in line for the White House.

AT THE END of the San Francisco Conference, Stettinius was named the American delegate to the United Nations. Truman did everything he could to make it sound like a promotion. But still it was interpreted as finding a place for someone who had to be taken care of.

That in itself was a bad start for the handsome, silver-haired amateur who had stepped from the higher echelons of business into the higher echelons of government. Those who observed him closely at London felt that he was no match for such skilled, hard driving professionals as the Soviet delegate, Andrei Vyshinsky.

If the President does accede to Stettinius' earnest desire to resign, he will be faced with the problem of finding a qualified successor. Such men do not grow on trees. In the meantime an able professional diplomat, Herschel Johnson, is Stettinius' deputy as provided by law. There will be time to look for a man—for the man—for this all-important post.

Battle Is Developing in House On Civilian Atom Control Bill

By the Associated Press

House members were squaring away yesterday for a fight over whether atomic energy development should be controlled by civilians or the military.

The controversy developed anew as a result of Senate passage Saturday of a bill which rests major control in a civilian commission of five full-time members. The full-time service provision is the one that puts most emphasis on civilian control, since Army men could hardly meet it and retain their full military status.

Some members of the House Military Committee said they will oppose this legislation and seek favorable action instead for a measure backed by the War Department.

The latter bill, approved months ago by the military group, would create a commission of nine part-time members, to be advised by representatives of the armed forces.

Sparkman Opposes Plan

House Democratic Whip Sparkman of Alabama declared, however, that he will oppose such action.

Sparkman told a reporter he will fight for House acceptance of the Senate legislation.

Sparkman added that the first round of the battle probably will be fought out in the Rules Committee some time this week. He said final House action will not be scheduled until next week.

The Rules Committee already has before it the bill backed by the military group. Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) has blocked action on it for several months, however, because he opposes it.

Sabath said he will support Sparkman's move.

The Senate bill would give the five-member commission broad controls over the production and utilization of fissionable, or explosive, materials, such as those which go into atomic bombs.

A military liaison committee would be empowered to protest to the President any commission action it believes harms national security. In addition the President would name a board of civilian advisers and Congress would pick 18 members to check the commission's work.

Baruch to Testify

By the United Press

The United States' role in world atomic policy may be clarified Wednesday when elder statesman Bernard M. Baruch testifies at a closed session of the Senate Atomic Energy Committee.

The 76-year-old United States representative to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission for weeks has been studying the first blueprint for world atomic control drafted for the State Department by a special committee of scientists and industrial experts. Thus far he has expressed no views on the plan, so his words will be weighed as pointing the direction American policy will take.

U. S. Policy Attacked

London, June 2 (U.P.).—The publication Propagandist of the Russian Communist Party said today that no progress has been made toward peaceful utilization of atomic energy because the United States is concentrating on its use for military purposes, an Exchange Telegraph Moscow dispatch said.

"Military circles in the United States, fearing leakage of information, aim to block completely all possibilities of atomic energy," the publication was quoted as saying. "Thus a great scientific and technical discovery is used only for military aims and reactionary foreign policy."

"Safely... TO THEIR HOMES AGAIN"

WE ARE PROUD that our traditional and honored seamanship was called upon for these missions of mercy.

Now that peace has returned, the pre-war facilities of the M.V. GRIPSHOLM and S.S. DROTTNINGHOLM are available again to all who have business or private reasons for traveling to Sweden.

It is still too soon to announce the resumption of the famous Swedish American Line cruises, but we look forward eagerly to the restoration of this popular service.

Meanwhile, we offer direct, dependable, convenient passenger and freight service between the United States and Sweden.

Testimonial

The M.V. Gripsholm, while under charter to the United States Government from May 1942 to April 1946 anchored herself securely in the pages of the history of humanity by her eleven voyages across war-tossed seas to succor from prison and hospital the thousands of civilians, and sick and wounded combatants, whom she carried safely to their homes again.

For the gallant and self-sacrificing men and women of the Gripsholm, to whose services of mercy the return to happiness and health of these thousands of rescued are forever indebted, the assuring name "Gripsholm" will stand in the memory of mankind as the symbol of their deeds well done, and of their dauntless spirit.

On behalf of the Government of the United States I take pleasure in attesting the abiding gratitude of America to the Gripsholm and her complement.

Done at the City of Washington this twenty-seventh day of March in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-six and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and seventy-first.

Nation in Grip of Moral Slump, Says Pastor

Dr. Albert J. McCartney, director of the Chicago Sunday Evening Club, yesterday urged that "America steel itself, spiritually, to fight pessimism and despair."

Speaking at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, where he formerly served as pastor, Dr. McCartney said that this "Nation has apparently reached a dead-end street spiritually."

"Some of us are frightened men, frightened almost to the verge of panic," he said, "but being frightened is not enough to save us from the catastrophe whose gigantic shadow seems creeping over tomorrow. America must wake up."

U. S. in Spiritual Slump

Dr. McCartney charged that America is in "a moral and spiritual slump that defies calculation," and added:

"Yet, for all this indictment of our forgetfulness, our selfishness and our carelessness, I am not convinced that a whole people such as ours must rush into the sea of self-destruction, like the Gaderene swine possessed of the devil."

The minister reminded his former congregation of "the amazing patience of God, who was so often disappointed with man whom He had created in His own image."

Later, Dr. McCartney made a plea against succumbing to "this spirit of bitterness, hopelessness and futility."

New Evaluation Needed, Says Dr. Hastings

"What this world needs is a new evaluation of the individual man," Dr. J. Warren Hastings declared yesterday at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle.

"Until this happens, we are doomed to defeat and failure," he continued. "As long as we hold a low estimate of man there will be wars and rumors of wars. Our whole social and economic fabric rests ultimately on a common foundation—the regard in which we hold the personality of the individual human being. We must raise our sights or else we will lower them on a world in chaos and ruin.

"Democracy is built on a main cornerstone of thought and . . . the potentialities of each person are held in high regard. Unless this is true there can be no lasting democracy. The greatest need of the world at this moment is to do some clear and steady thinking . . ."

Catholics of 19 Nations Pray for World Peace

Lifeline

FLYING, VIA TACA, is more than a luxurious way of Latin American travel.

Much more.

TACA is a lifeline, spun of metal and air and the skill of man . . . that links town to town, coast to mountain, farm to market, family to relative and friend.

So TACA has waked dead mines to life . . . flying in every piece of machinery, every nut and bolt, all the people, all the food—even the water to drink.

So TACA has given wings not alone to the big businessman and the important government official . . . but to the farmer, the miner, the salesman, and the little businessman . . . to all people, great and small.

When you remember that there are so many places here that formerly meant weeks of travel by burro, that TACA now hops in hours and minutes . . . it becomes understandable why this lifeline has grown into Latin America's largest airline system.

Today TACA operates more than 50 fast, modern airliners over 23,000 miles of magnificent skyway in fourteen Central and South American countries. Manned by nationals of these lands, advised by technical experts from North America . . . TACA is growing, too, as a lifeline of travel and trade and goodwill between our two continents.

Farrell Urges Nation to Back Peron Fully

Buenos Aires, June 2 (AP).—President Edelmiro J. Farrell, who will step down as chief executive of Argentina Tuesday in favor of President-elect Juan D. Peron, appealed to the nation in a farewell speech today for full support of the new administration.

Farrell said:

"Although we have been accused of maintaining a dictatorship, I belive no other country exists with greater liberties. Our people are the only one in the world with liberty to eat virtually unrestricted."

He said there was no unemployment in Argentina and that the nation's industry has been increased considerably. The 1943 revolution triumphed, he asserted, because "right and justice were with it."

Describing Argentina as a "true democracy," Farrell said the nation "felt toward other countries of similar tendency sincere friendship . . ." He said his administration had respected the rights of citizens and workers and "for the first time citizens voted with absolute freedom."

Much of the work of the military government was "misunderstood" abroad, Farrell declared, because the regime "did not advertise its achievements and worked without propaganda and publicity."

New Molecular Bands Found on Two Planets

Austin, Tex., June 2 (AP).—Hitherto unknown molecular bands of carbon dioxide around Venus and of ammonia around Jupiter have been photographed at the McDonald Observatory at Fort Davis, the University of Texas announced today.

Such spectra are interesting, it was explained, because of the presence of strong atomic radiations.

Braden Warns Against Deals With Dictators

Reading, Pa., June 2 (AP).—Assistant Secreary of State Spruille Braden attacked those who he said advocate that the United States make "deals" with foreign dictatorships and asserted such a course would "endanger our future security."

A caustic critic of Argentina, Braden told the graduating class of Albright College here in a commencement address that "today's appeasement entails a stupendously higher price tomorrow."

Are Not Identified

He did not identify the advocates of deal-making and appeasement to whom he referred.

Speaking at a moment when Gen. Carlos von der Becke, retired Argentine army chief of staff is in Miami on his way to Washington on a mystery-shrouded mission, Braden declared:

"There are those who even yet, after the cruel lessons of the conflict from which our sons are not all returned, advocate that our Government make 'deals' with foreign dictatorships, with the enemies of freedom, on the basis of expediency.

Would Strengthen Them

"Such a course would strengthen those forces and eventually weaken our own salutary influence by betraying the principles for which our genuine friends, liberty-loving peoples, everywhere look to us.

"Such a course would endanger our future security. It is infinitely wiser for this Nation—for every nation—to renounce momentary advantages, alluring though they be, rather than for the sake of them to sacrifice its reputation and its influence."

By the United Press

Dominican exiles in five countries are hoping to bring the case of President Rafael Trujillo y Molina before the United Nations Security Council as a possible threat to hemisphere peace and the sovereignty of the Republic of Haiti, it was disclosed last night.

Exiles here said they are calling upon their fellow countrymen in San Juan, Puerto Rico; Havana, Cuba; Caracas, Venezuela, and Mexico City to join with them "with the object of ending the Trujillo regime and creating a democratic Dominican government."

Supreme Court Has 22 Cases Still Unsettled

By the United Press

The Supreme Court hopes to wind up its 1945-46 term today, but with 22 cases still unsettled there is little prospect that the seven justices can start their summer vacation for another week or two.

Activities of the tribunal have been noticeably slowed since the death of Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone April 22. The absence of Justice Robert H. Jackson at the Nuernberg war crimes trials is an added handicap.

Not more than four decisions have been handed down during any of the five Monday decision days since Stone died. In the past, the justices frequently disposed of 10 or 15 cases at a single session.

Cases Hanging Fire

The difficulty the justices are experiencing in reaching agreement is shown by the fact that three cases have been hanging fire for more than six months.

One is the Government's anti-trust suit against the "big three" tobacco manufacturers—American, Liggett & Myers and R. J. Reynolds.

The court also has been considering since last December whether the death penalty should be carried out against Julius Fisher, Negro convicted of murdering a librarian at the Washington Cathedral two years ago. Fisher contended the prosecution did not prove premeditation.

A ruling on Virginia's "Jim Crow" law, requiring segregation of Negro bus passengers, is expected to have a far-reaching effect on the laws of other Southern States.

Other Cases Pending

The court may pass on the challenge of three Illinois citizens to the State's present congressional districting.

Also pending:

Attemps by three former Federal employes, who were taken off the Government's payroll by a special act of Congress, to get the congressional action declared unconstitutional.

A contempt of court case against the Miami Herald and its associate editor, John D. Pennekamp, for publishing two editorials and a cartoon criticizing proceedings in a Miami court.

Welles Urges Another Parley Of Big 3 Chiefs

By the United Press

Former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles last night called for another meeting of the chiefs of state of the iBg Three powers to remove the "rapidly growing antagonism" between Russia and the United States.

Only such a conference, he said in a radio address, can prevent "the continued existence of the mutual fear" which is darkening relations between the two nations.

Referring to the divergent reports on the Paris foreign ministers conference by Secretary of State James F. Byrnes and Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, he said:

"The time seems to have passed when we can anticipate that the foreign ministers can accomplish such an understanding. We can apparently only hope for such a far-reaching understanding if the heads of the governments of Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States once more meet for that specific purpose."

Welles said "the blunt truth is that conditions have reached such a pass during the brief period since the end of the war that each of the two major powers of the world is beginning to take precautionary measures against the other.

"None of us can be so blind as not to know that, once two great powers start along this road, the situation has become very dangerous indeed."

Floods Take 3 Lives; Snow In Midwest

Three persons lost their lives in floods caused by heavy rains in the East yesterday while the Midwest shivered in frigid tempertures accompanied by a snowfall.

Robert Montgomery, 11-year-old Boy Scout of Collegeville, Pa., and an unidentified man of Philadelphia were swept to their deaths as flood waters struck for the second time within a week.

The high water overflowed the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad station in Philadelphia, forcing the road to reroute trains.

Girl, 9, Is Drowned

At Amity, Pa., 9-year-old Loraine Kennimond was drowned when she tumbled into the swirling waters of Ten Mile Creek. The body was not recovered.

At Uniontown, Pa., a flash flood struck the eastern and southeastern sections of the town. The Weather Bureau reported 2.58 inches of rain.

Electric and gas power in Uniontown were shut off for several hours. Trolley service was disrupted for eight hours.

Pittsburgh prepared for a flood stage of 25 feet predicted for noon today.

New York City was visited by a 20-hour downpour which brought cancellation of 38 plane flights and the temporary blocking of several important highways leading to the city. Seventeen persons were hospitalized following accidents traceable to weather.

The heavy rain also hit up-State New York and Elmira reported flood danger.

Snow fell in parts of Minnesota, Wisconsin and upper Michigan. The temperature was 46 degrees in Chicago and is expected to go lower.

Five inches of rain fell in 24 hours at Huntington, W. Va., and the Ohio River was near flood stage there.

At Collegeville, Grover Cranmer, 38-year-old scoutmaster, told how two firemen rowed a small boat to an island in the river where a score of scouts were stranded. A rope was tied to a tree on the island and a telephone pole to the mainland 100 yards away.

The two firemen, Cranmer said, began hauling the scouts three at a time by pulling the boat along the ropes.

On the first trip about 40 feet from shore the small craft suddenly overturned, spilling its occupants. Each fireman grabbed a boy and perched him atop of the overturend boat. The third scout, Robert Montgomery, was swept away.

250,000 Yank Dead To Be Returned to U. S.

Indianapolis, June 2 (AP).—The bodies of nearly a quarter of a million servicemen and women killed in World War II will be returned to the United States for burial with military honors in their home soil, Mancel Talcott, chairman of the American Legion grave registration program, announced today.

This will be 8 per cent of those buried in foreign lands, Talcott said.

2-Year-Old Jap Held in May Plot To Kill MacArthur

Tokyo, June 2 (U.P.).—A 21-year-old Japanese youth, Terunori Arai, suspected of complicity in the May 1 plot to assassinate Gen. Douglas MacArthur, has been captured by Japanese police at Shibukawa station, 60 miles northwest of Tokyo.

The youth was arrested after he was overheard to declare MacArthur "must be eliminated." A fellow passenger on the train from Tokyo to Shibukawa informed police. Arai has not confessed any connection with the would-be assassins.

The prisoner was decalred to be held by an American Military Government unit.

Salvation Army Gets a Lift

Castle, who said he got his start in music with a Salvation Army band 18 years ago, said he plays with the "Army" about twice a week, wherever his band happens to be. "This is the first time I've been caught at it," he said last night. He is playing at the Roosevelt Hotel here now.

Outlook For Summer

By Roger W. Babson

New Business Records Forecast

Business activity in the next few months should constantly improve in most lines. With newspapers full of uncertainties regarding politics and other depressing items, it is a relief to focus one's attention on the good news from the domestic front.

Textile mills have stepped up schedules since the German armies destroyed many of the big mill centers in northern France and Belgium. Gray goods sales have been high and the demand for shirts and men's wear of all kinds is tremendous.

Steel operations have been handicapped by strikes of all kinds, but now have a green light to go ahead. Many thought the end of the war might hit the steel industry harder than most others, but it has not. Inventories in consumers' hands are said to be lower than ever before.

Chemical industries are just beginning to feel the good effects of the postwar program. How much they will add to the business total in the next few months is uncertain just now. Investors, businessmen and workers should, however, keep in mind that this Nation is entering upon a tremendous plastic program which can be operated with little fear of strikes. Therefore, what is now on the books is a mere sampling of what is to follow in chemical developments.

Retail trade is remarkably good. It is running 25 per cent or more above a year ago. This comparison with 1945 levels comes from the industrial areas of the Middlewest, from the South and from the Pacific Coast. Rising payrolls mean that these gains should continue for sometime to come. I am still bullish on merchandise securities as the best hedge against both wage increases and inflation.

Tourist business: Due to the hesitancy of cruising even to the West Indies, South America, Alaska and other places, most tourist money will be left in this country and Canada this summer. The greater efforts which the railroad and bus lines are making in developing travel indicate that this summer will see the largest vacation season on record.

The business outlook for the summer, therefore, is good. There will be no set-backs due to cancellation of orders or psychological reactions. Any change will be to increase an already high level of activity. Hence, I believe that over-all business this summer should be even better than ever before. If you plan a vacation away from home, you better get your reservations now.

The strike leaders have surely overplayed their hands. At last they got the American people aroused by their arrogance and indifference to the public welfare. I am sorry for this because I believe in intelligent collective bargaining with arbitration as a last resort. But when a Lewis or a Whitney holds a pistol to our heads to force the signing of a contract, this is revolution and insurrection. Let us hope Congress will make this impossible to occur again.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Greenwood Lake, N. J., June 2.—On the winding auto trails that skirt the Jersey Lake country, you heavy-foot it on the accelerator for 16 miles beyond Joe Louis' training camp until you run smack-dab into Gleason's place on a bend in the road, which looks like a thousand other dine-and-dance joints on a thousand other highways.

POVICH

Gleason's place is different now. The juke box is out, stilled for five weeks while Billy Conn does his fancy dancing on the floor formerly reserved for jitterbugs, except that it's now occupied by a regulation ring. Gleason's place is Conn's training camp, with the fight for the championship only 18 days away.

Conn's camp is pitched in rolling, verdant country by the lakeside, an ideal spot for a guy with the serious business of going into the ring against Joe Louis at hand. Bleacher seats are there for the fans willing to pay $1.30, including tax, for the pleasure of watching Conn box eight rounds daily against sparring partners. When the weather is good they see him work outside in another ring, set up by the lakeside.

Right now, Greenwood Lake looks like a country suburb of Pittsburgh, Conn's home town. Pittsburgh folks are flocking to the spot to see their Billy boy in action. He's their guy, the ex-Dead End Kid from Pittsburgh who they think is going to beat Joe Louis for the heavyweight championship of the world on June 19 at Yankee Stadium.

Of the six sparring partners in camp, five are from Pittsburgh, rough, tough guys that Conn grew up with. Plus his little brother Jackie, who thinks he's a fighter in his own right, and right now is intent on winning all that Billy has at gin rummy, poker and dice. Conn works for an hour every day, and then he goes hell-bent for cards, craps and fun.

"He took me for eight hundred at poker last night," moaned brother Jackie, but I'll get him tonight at gin. That's my game. I'll own half of him by the time he steps into the ring with Louis." It's wonderful, this Billy and Jackie relationship. Jackie'll fight the guy who says Billy won't lick Louis, and he'll fight Billy, too, if his big brother shows any lack of confidence, which is a long shot.

We asked Billy about Louis today, and he was forthright enough. "Joe's had that title for a long time," he said, "and I gotta win it this time, it's my last chance, and I'm desperate." Conn needs the money that the title would bring him, because he says himself, "I spend a lot of money." Only one thing is certain, Conn, title or no is going to wind up broke, because, as he says, he spends a lot of money.

In Conn's dressing room was a brand new baseball autographed by his friend Leo Durocher with the inscription, "Good luck, Billy, "bring it back." Durocher obviously didn't mean bring back the baseball. What he meant was bring back the world heavyweight title.

Durocher sent not only the ball, but a brand new bat to Conn, and when it was suggested that Conn might do well to take the bat into the ring with him against Louis, young Jackie objected. "All he needs to take in there with him is that left hook. When he clouts Louis with that, Joe will think he's been slugged by a bat. Billy boy can't miss the title this time."

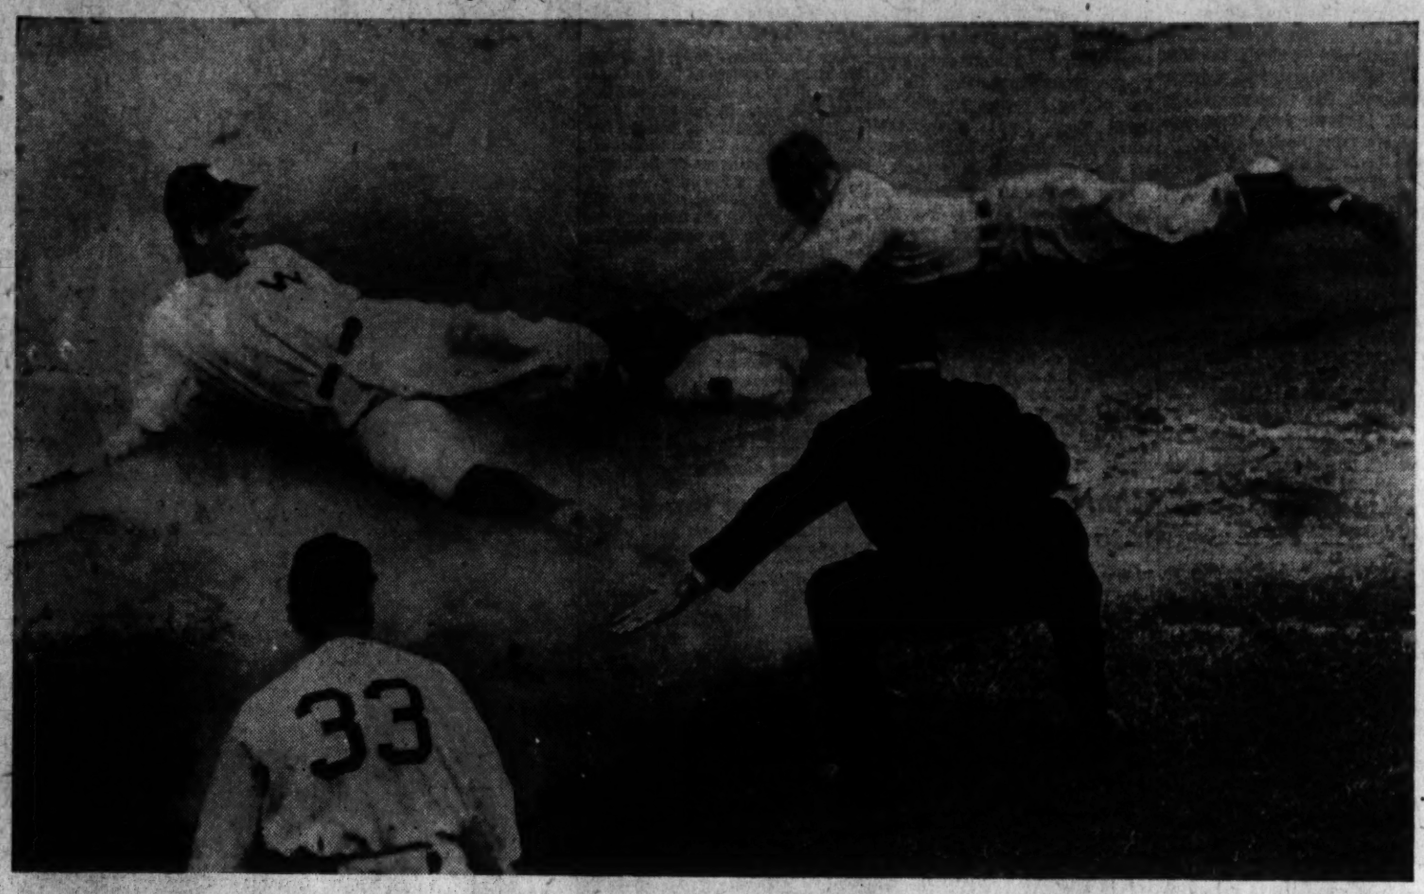
Billy boy looked pretty good in training today. He went at his sparring partners in a serious mood, belting them good when they got too fresh, but otherwise, contenting himself with taking it in the belly and on the arms from guys who couldn't touch him if these weren't training bouts. He boxed eight full rounds against four different sparring mates.

The fellow who gave him the best workout was Erv Sarlin, a light heavy from Conn's Pittsburgh section where he grew up with Billy and just before the war knocked Lee Oma cold. Sarlin was pounding Conn right smart in the body when all of a sudden Conn went down, not from a punch but from a slip. The 300 fans in the bleachers oh'd and ah'd at the spectacle of the challenger on the floor.

Then Billy got mad. He permitted the referee to wipe off his gloves and then he tore into Sarlin and all but finished him off. He was whipping across a right hand that he says he never had before. "I'm stronger," said Billy after the session. "I weigh 185 and I'll go in against Louis at 183. They said last night I weighed 174 against Louis, that's a lie. I was only 169. These 14 pounds I've got are going to win that title for me. Louis will know what hit him. It'll be 183 pounds of Conn, who just grew up."

Newhouser Strikes Out 13, Nats Bow, 10-2

From First to Third on Passed Ball a la Hitchcock



SPEED ON HOOF—Billy Hitchcock, who made his local debut yesterday with the Nats against his old team mates, the Detroit Tigers, wasted little time demonstrating his speed in the first inning. With Spence on third and Billy on first, Paul Richards, Tiger catcher, let the fourth ball to Heath get away from him. Spence scored easily but to Richards' surprise and dismay, Hitchcock kept right on going from first to third with a fine burst of speed and a sweeping slide to pull in ahead of the Tiger receiver's throw to third sacker George Kell. That at 33 isn't Sammy Baugh, its Joe Judge, Nat coach

Detroit Ace Overcomes Shaky Start

By Al Costello

"Prince Hal" Newhouser was a reigning monarch yesterday as far as the Nats were concerned. The long left-hander didn't do a thing but send 13 Nats back to the bench via the strikeout route as he breezed the Detroit Tigers to a 10-2 victory over the home forces and ruined a perfectly good afternoon for 21,935 customers.

The defeat left the Nats only a few percentage points ahead of the Bengals in third place, 3½ games behind the Yankees.

At that, Newhouser had to bear down to overcome early shakiness that threatened to have him out of there. Five of the Nats' eight hits, including four doubles, came in the first three innings when the Nats scored their runs and at one stage in the third, a good solid smash by either Gerry Priddy or Cecil Travis might have put a different aspect on the game. But Newhouser was there with a pair—a pair of strikeouts—and the Nats were gone geese. From then on, Newhouser was distinctly the boss.

Every Nat but Mickey Vernon and Pinch-hitter Evans whiffed before the snaky, fast balling "Prince Hal." Vernon got two hits, a single and double and drove in a run. Even Stan Spence, who collected two doubles and a single in his first three times at bat, finally had the discomfiture to watch Newhouser slip a third strike past him in the sixth, when Hal fanned the side. Twice Hal fanned four in a row, getting Priddy and Travis to end the third and Guerra and Scarborough to start the fourth and in the seventh when he whiffed Hitchcock after getting Curtis, Lewis and Spence in the sixth.

Niggeling Streak Snapped

Meanwhile, the Tigers were having fun with four Nat hurlers, venerable Jawn Niggeling who got his personal three-game winning streak snapped, Rae Scarborough, Vernon Curtis and Max Wilson. Thirteen hits rattled off their bats, including two triples by Eddie Mayo and one by George Kell and a pair of doubles by Dick Wakefield, who is supposed to be in a slump but who connected for four in five trips.

The Tigers gave hints of future trouble right away in the first when Mayo tripled against the right-field fence and scored on Wakefield's single, but the Nats got it back in their half of the inning when Spence doubled and advanced to third when Lake messed up Hitchcock's bounder, and scored when Richards let Newhouser's fourth ball to Heath get away from him. With two on, Priddy fanned to end the threat.

Then the Tigers really went to work on Niggeling in the second. Cullenbine walked, but Moore popped. Kell lined a single to center and Richards slashed one to left that let Cullenbine count and sent Kell to third. Newhouser laid down a perfect squeeze bunt to score Kell, and Richards moved to second while Newhouser was out at first. But the Tigers weren't finished with Old Jawn. Lake singled to score Richards and Mayo smacked another triple to right to bring in the fourth Tiger tally of the inning. Scarborough finally had to come in and make Evers ground out.

Spence Doubles Again

Wakefield's double, a sacrifice and Moore's fly made it 6-1, and the Nats quickly made it 6-2 on Spence's second straight double and Vernon's single. Heath doubled off the wall to put men on third and second with two away, but with chances to put the Nats back in the ball game, both Priddy

Dodgers Win Pair, 2-1, 1-0; Boost Lead

Cincinnati, June 2 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers swept both ends of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds today, 2-1 and 1-0, to extend their first place lead over the twice-defeated St. Louis Cardinals to 3½ games.

A crowd of 32,391 paying fans, the largest Crosley Field gathering of the season, saw the Dodgers score their winning tally in the eleventh inning of the opener and then squeeze past a close one in the nightcap on the masterful pitching of Art Herring and Hugh Casey.

Herring, victor in the second game, pitched hitless ball for the first five innings but was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth after he pulled a muscle in his arm. Casey allowed four hits thereafter.

The Dodgers' winning tally came in the opening frame when Ed Stanky walked, moved to second on a ground out and came home on Dixie Walker's single.

Louis Pounds Sparmates In Workout

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 2 (AP).—Joe Louis displayed some of his formidable punching ability today but the heavyweight champion also continued to be an easy target for his sparring partners.

With little more than two weeks to go for his title defense against Billy Conn, there was some concern in the Brown Bomber's camp over his sluggishness and vulnerability.

Conn Goes 6 Rounds In 'Great Workout'

Greenwood Lake, N. J., June 2 (U.P.).—With one of his sparmates on the sidelines because of an overdose of blows, Billy Conn went six fast rounds against three others today in what Manager Johnny Ray called a "great workout."

Mickey McAvoy, huge heavyweight on whom Conn has been sharpening his punches, had to take the day off because of Billy's continual bombardment.

So Conn belabored his brother, Jackie, for two rounds and went the same distance against Jimmy Smith and Mickey Belluscio.

Giants Twice Lick Cards, 1-0 and 7-6

St. Louis, June 2 (AP).—Two former Cardinals—Walker Cooper and Buddy Blattner—hit home runs today that gave the New York Giants a 7-6, 11-inning second-game triumph over the St. Louis Redbirds who had suffered their first shutout defeat of the year, 1-0, in the opener at the hands of big Bill Voiselle.

A paid attendance of 14,051 sat in temperatures only slightly above 50 to watch the twin loss which dropped the Cards 3½ games behind the Brooklyn Dodgers who won a twin bill at Cincinnati.

Cooper's circuit drive came with the bases loaded in the sixth. Sid Gordon also hit a homer in the same inning to put the Giants six runs ahead, but the Cards came back to tie and set the stage for Blattner's climax clout in the eleventh.

Mike Budnick was the pitching hero of the nightcap although official credit went to Junior Thompson who had walked two with none out in the eleventh when Mike was called in. Whitey Kurowski sacrificed the pair into scoring position but after Harry Walker was passed intentionally Marty Marion hit into a home plate force out and Ken O'Dea fouled out.

Walker, substituting at first base for injured Dick Sisler, hit a sixth inning homer with one on for the Cards.

Blattner scored the opener's only run. He doubled, stayed on second while Goody Rosen beat out a roller and scored when Centerfielder Terry Moore fumbled Willard Marshall's looping single before throwing to the plate.

President Chased Into Stands

Mickey Owen, Pasquel Banished by Umpire

Mexico City, June 2 (U.P.).—Mexican League Umpire Amado Maestri today ordered president of the circuit Jorge Pasquel and Vera Cruz Manager Mickey Owen off the field for arguing during a wild game with the Mexico City Reds and announced afterward that he was leaving for his home in Cuba tomorrow.

Maestri and another umpire, Raul Atan, also a Cuban, protested against lack of discipline in the league and said they were through.

Owen, catcher-manager of Vera Cruz, protested a decision at the plate called against his team by Maestri. Maestri ordered him off the field and Pasquel, whose millions brought Owen and other former American stars to Mexico, leaped on the field to upbraid the umpire.

Maestri delivered a lecture to Pasquel about umpires' rights on the field and ordered Pasquel to get off, too. He went back to the stands—reluctantly.

The game also marked the Mexican League debut of Lefty Max Lanier, former Cardinal pitcher, who worked the last three and two thirds innings of the 12-inning game, which Vera Crux won 11 to 9.

Lanier, now automatically barred from American organized baseball for five years, faced 11 batters and gave up only one hit. He struck out four and walked one, getting credit for the victory.

Vera Crux scored twice in the twelfth off Tomas De La Cruz, fourth Mexico City pitcher, formerly of the Cincinnati Reds. He was charged with the defeat.

Pirates Beat Phillies, 5-1; Lose 2d, 10-3

Pittsburgh, June 2 (AP).—Pittsburgh and Philadelphia split their double-header today, the Pirates taking the opener, 5 to 1, on brilliant four-hit pitching of "Rip" Sewell and the Phillies the nightcap, 10 to 3.

Threatening weather and a steady morning rain held the crowd to 8971.

The Phillies won the closing game with a seven-run uprising in the seventh inning after Rookie Ralph Kiner had tied the score for the Bucs in the previous frame by lofting his seventh homer of the year over the scoreboard with two mates on base.

Sewell, returning to action for the first time since his collapse on May 5, had the Phillies eating out of his hand throughout the opener, although it took a four-run rally, featuring doubles by Bob Elliott and Elbie Fletcher, to give him his winning margin.

Capital Transit Wins

Behind the six-hit pitching of Al Tucci, Capital Transit yesterday defeated Glendale, 3-1, at Glendale. Richards and Tucci, with two hits apiece, led the winners' bat attack.

Rookie Rickert Stars as Cubs, Braves Divide

Chicago, June 2 (AP).—Marvin Rickert, rookie Chicago Cubs' outfielder, made Pitcher Claude Passeau's fourth victory of the year easy today as the Cubs split with the Boston Braves by losing the first game, 6-3 and taking the second, 8-2.

Rickert used a single-double and a long fly to bat in five runs and scored one himself. Passeau's part in the Cubs' nineteenth victory in 38 games was a well-pitched five-hitter.

Boston arranged Mort Cooper's third win of the year by chasing Johnny Schmitz, the Cubs' rookie southpaw, with a four-run blast in the first inning of the opener. Emil Kush, Hiram Bithorn and Paul Erickson followed Schmitz to the hill, and between them limited the Braves to six hits.

and Travis whiffed. That was just about all for the Nats, as Newhouser tossed six-hit ball for the final six frames.

The Tigers counted twice in the fifth when Wakefield singled and moved along on Cullenbine's grounder. Moore was purposely walked and former Athletic George Kell tossed the strategy into the ash can by selecting one of Scarborough's choice offerings and sending it down the left-field line for a triple that scored both. The other two runs came when Lake and Mayo worked a double steal in the sixth and Richards singled, stole second and moved up on Newhouser's sacrifice and scored on Lake's long fly to Lewis.

But after the second inning, it was all superfluous the way Newhouser was wheeling along.

Some 2000 reserved seats are still available for the first night game of the year tonight, plus 12,000 grandstand and 8000 pavillion and bleacher roosts on the first come, first served basis. Gates open 6 p. m., game time at 8:30 . . . Dutch Leonard, with his 5-0 record, will go against Frank (Stubby) Overmire, who has 0-2 and has twice been belted out by the Nats . . . Mike Guerra relieved Al Evans behind the plate yesterday simply because he caught Niggeling in Jawn's three starts and three wins . . . Tiger Manager Steve O'Neill gave Hank Greenberg a day of rest yesterday but he'll be back tonight . . . Eddie Mayo's feat of hitting two triples in consecutive innings isn't a record by any means. Six times two three-baggers have been clouted in the same inning by as many different players . . .

Perry Among Favorites in Pro Net Event

Richmond, Va., June 2 (AP).—Frederick John Perry, former Wimbledon and United States singles champion, who has been playing some of his finest tennis during the winter professional tour, will be one of the favorites in the National Clay Court professional tennis championships at the Country Club of Virginia June 19-23.

"That's when I began to love cigars"

"Honestly, I never got the flavor I hoped for out of big, thick, clumsy cigars," says a youngish man who smokes his share of cigars. "Then I took up Robt. Burns Panatelas and found exactly what I was looking for—delicious taste—luscious, satisfying enjoyment." Taste is what every cigar smoker seeks. Size and shape don't matter if taste isn't right.

The widespread popularity of Robt. Burns Panatelas de Luxe is a visible fact smokers do well to consider. There must be a reason why more of them are smoked than all other high grade panatelas combined. The reason is taste, rich mellow taste, a delicious flavor that comes from expertly selected 100% All-Havana filler, fashioned into a graceful, balanced cigar.

It is modern too, long, streamlined, and inconspicuous between a smoker's lips. The cigar of young men and men with young ideas. A true luxury cigar in taste and look.

Overton-Bassler Score Over Peacock-Burnett in Md. Event

By Oscar Elder

Spencer Overton and Charley Bassler, the No. 1 tandem from Rolling Road Country Club, Catonsville, Md., yesterday surprised a large gallery at Chevy Chase Country Club by decisively whipping Roger Peacock and Volney Burnett, the favored duo from Indian Spring, 6 and 4, in the finals of the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball championship.

Bassler was making one of his first appearances in topflight competition, but the triumph was old stuff for Overton who has finished on the winning combine three times out of five tries. Yesterday's titular play was the first since the war called a halt to the event after the 1940 championship, which Overton and Erford Barnes won from Peacock and Claude Rippy at Baltimore's Five Farms course.

Chevy Chase was a soggy layout yesterday and the scores reflected it. Overton won three of the first five holes and took a 37 for the best individual nine on the front half. Starting at the turn, the long-hitting Bassler was even par when the match ended on the fourteenth green.

The teams split the initial hole with bogey 5s and that ended the Indian Spring threat as Peacock and Burnett, playing far below their normal pace, failed to win any of the 14 holes. The Rolling Road twosome were 4 up at the turn and scored 12 pars, a bird and a bogey over the route to finish even with par.

BELLE HAVEN

Lew Worsham toured the flat, rain-swept terrain in a blazing 4-under-par 68 to tie the course record as he and Andy Gibson, Country Club of Maryland pro, handed Chandler Harper, Portsmouth (Va.) pro, and John O'Donnell, professional at the Norfolk Officers' Club, a 1-up defeat in an exhibition 18.

The lantern-jawed Congressional pro missed setting a new course mark of 67 just by a whisker when an 8-foot putt rimmed the cup and then rolled out, but his round shares the standard set by Tommy Ryan, Ralph Beach, Wiffy Cox and Leo Walper.

Worsham and Gibson posted a best ball of 66, 6 under par, while their opponents finished 5 under par.

Tremendous drives by Worsham topped the show for some 300 spectators who contributed between $350 and $400 to the gate. On the 354-yard twelfth hole his tee shot landed a scant 5 yards off the green, and on the next hole, a 312-yard test, he drove the green. He was on the 557-yard sixth hole in 2. The same hole stands 580 on the second round, and Worsham collected a birdie 4 after missing an eagle by an inch.

Gibson aided his partner in the match play with a birdie 4 on No. 6 and a par on the final green, and carded a 75 for the day.

O'Donnell was 2 over regulation going out, but had a subpar 34 coming home to finish even with par, and Harper's rounds were 37, 38—75.

Proceeds of the exhibition will be presented by Belle Haven to the five golfers who qualify at Burning Tree today for the National Open.

WASHINGTON

J. R. Murphy was low net winner in the medal play handicap with a 64. His round of 75 was aided by an 11-stroke allowance. Dr. J. E. Cope, 94—28—66, finished second low net.

The third net award was a quadrangular tie between Jack Joslin, 78-10, 68; R. P. Brandt, 83-15, 68; T. F. Burke, 83-15, 68, and Col. D. R. King, 88-20, 68.

Mid-Atlantic Golf Opens at Chevy Chase

Seventy-six amateur linksmen, representing the elite of the Washington-Baltimore area, will tee off at Chevy Chase Country Club tomorrow in the 43rd playing of the Middle Atlantic Golf Association amateur championships.

Eighteen holes of medal play will qualify the field into flights of 16 and match play will be the schedule Wednesday. The semi-final rounds in all flights and consolations will be played Thursday morning and all finals wind up the tourney that afternoon.

Chevy Chase course will be open throughout today for practice rounds.

Claude Rippy, of Washington Golf and Country Club, will be in the role of defender tomorrow, having won the Mid-Atlantic title back in 1942, the last time the event was staged. However, he will not play the role of favorite. Bobby Brownell, who recently transferred his affiliation from Manor Club to Chevy Chase, is being hailed as the contender most likely to assume the championship mantle. Re-entering links competition after a four-year layoff, the G-Man recently won the Kenwood invitation and he has had some sub-par rounds to his credit since the season opened.

Volney Burnett, veteran Indian Spring shotmaker, is another who is conceded a chance in the event, as is Indian Spring's Buddy Sharkey.

Baltimore will be represented by strong contenders in the persons of Otto Greiner, Country Club of Maryland, and Spencer Overton, the bespectacled Rolling Road ace.

INDIAN SPRING

Mrs. M. Scandiffio finished 10 feet from the final pin to win the ladies flag tournament, followed by Mrs. Frank Butler who wound up 10 feet back of the leader.

The 71's posted last week by Buddy Sharkey, Eddie Ault and Bill McFerren stood up as the medal scores in the qualifying rounds for the club championship play which gets underway this week with first round matches. Almost 200 players have turned in qualifying scores and the pairings will be released today. Due to the size of the field, the championship flight will carry 32 contenders rather than the usual 16.

WOODMONT

Howard Nordlinger, winner of the 1945 title, heads the list of first flight qualifiers in the annual championship tourney. The other upper bracket players are C. Schulman, Jules Kinkleman, H. Neugass, L. W. Jacobs, Sam Schwartz, Bob Philipson, L. E. Harris, Dave Wortman, Merrill Oransky, Willard Goldheim, J. England, Melvin Kraft, Cabot Feldman, Ellis Edlowitz and Ed Wortman.

WASHINGTON AVIATION

G. F. Mesing, 93—18—75 and C. J. Bild, 90—15—75, were co-winners of the first blind bogey tourney of the season. Today's official opening drew a crowd of nearly 500 to the club.

QUANTICO

Lieut. Col. C. L. Granger ran up 50 points to head the list of winners in Pro Al Jamison's point tournament. Lieut. James A. Fenton finished second with 44 points, and Col. R. E. Baty was third with 41.

Capt. R. E. Sullivan sank a six-iron shot from 150 yards out to card an eagle 3 on the 603-yard seventh hole.

35 Pros Vie For 'Open' Berths Today

The lengthy Burning Tree Country Club course will be the battle ground today for 35 links professionals and six amateurs, and when the sound and fury of 36 holes of medal play has departed, five will have qualified as sectional representatives to the National Open, scheduled for June 13-15 at Canterbury Golf Club in Cleveland.

Larrupin' Lew Worsham, former Burning Tree pro, who now plays out of Congressional, is favored to win today's affair and clinch the No. 1 qualifying spot, and he more than justified this opinion yesterday when he equalled the course record at Belle Haven with a four-under-par 68 in an exhibition over the rain-sodden layout with Andy Gibson, John O'Donnell and Chandler Harper, all of whom are competing today.

Harper, pro at the Portsmouth, Va., Glenshealiah Country Club, is also conceded a top chance to win an invitation to the Open, as is John O'Donnell, from the Norfolk Officers' Club.

Otto Greiner, Country Club of Maryland, tops the scant field of amateurs as the best bet to win a bid to Canterbury.

"MAKE IT A MILLION!"

Since last September over three-quarters of a million men have joined the Regular Army as volunteers. Many of them are veterans of World War II, who know and like Army life. Others are younger men—alert and ambitious—who have recognized their responsibility to serve their country and to relieve from duty men who took up arms against our enemies.

Never before in American history has the Army had so much to offer in good pay, travel, education and adventure. And never before in peacetime has your country needed such a strong and modern Regular Army for world-wide protection of peace and security.

If you are qualified, mentally and physically, for Regular Army enlistment, you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by finding out all the advantages the Army has to offer you. Stop at your nearest U. S. Army Recruiting Station today!

What is Russia up to, anyway?

John Foster Dulles, famous lawyer and international expert, has spent a large part of his life promoting the cause of peace. In 1937, forseeing a new war, he became Chairman of the Federal Council of Churches' Commission on a Just and Durable Peace. His book, "War, Peace and Change," is one of the most thoughtful analyses of the causes of war and the dynamics of peace ever written. As an official representative at the San Francisco Conference, where the United Nations Charter was drawn, and at two subsequent postwar conferences he spent many hours in direct negotiation with Soviet leaders and has had a unique opportunity to assess the Russian viewpoint in the interest of world peace.

Does some "master plan" explain the contradictions of Soviet Foreign Policy? What can America do about it NOW? See John Foster Dulles' authoritative answers in LIFE, starting June 3!

For Russia says that she attaches great importance to the United Nations . . .

but walks out of Security Council meetings, and has not even joined most of the other organizations for international co-operation!

And Russia fears "capitalistic imperialism". . .

but has annexed Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, parts of Czechoslovakia and Finland, the eastern half of Poland, and many other new territories and new peoples!

Contradictory? Confusing? Don't be too sure!

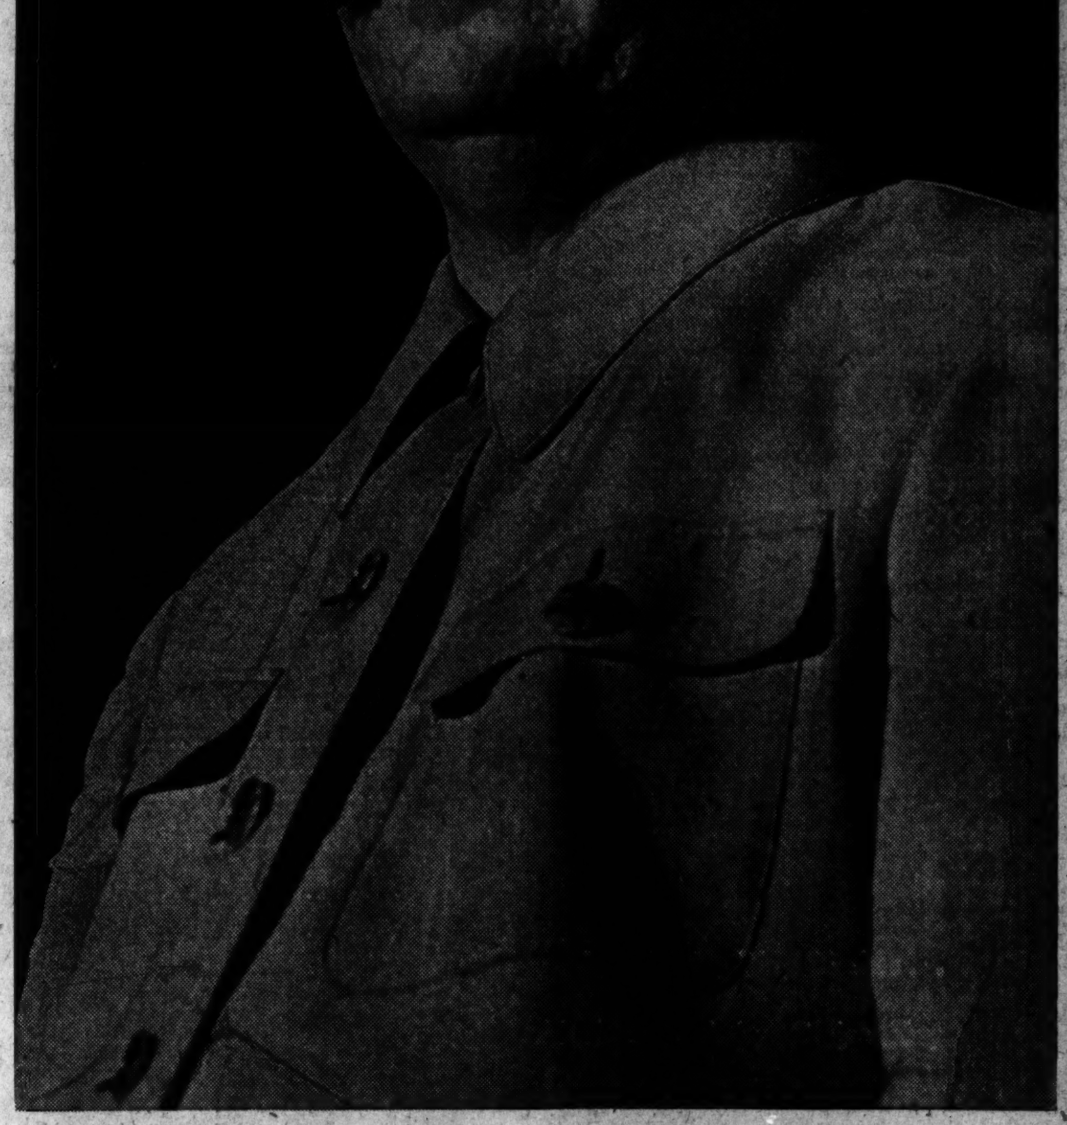
In the June 3 LIFE, John Foster Dulles fits these, and other pieces of the world's most baffling puzzle, into their place in the Russian plan—a master plan for the world that Russia wants!

Clearly, logically, realistically, he dispels your confusion . . . shows what he thinks the Russians are up to all over the world . . . details the shrewd techniques by which, he believes, the Russians hope to achieve world peace on Russian terms.

And in LIFE, June 10, Mr. Dulles gives his answer to the all-important question—how can America protect its heritage of freedom, and still avert a serious clash with the U.S.S.R.?

To more than 22,000,000 LIFE readers—the largest weekly magazine audience in America—these articles will do more than satisfy a normal hunger for precise information on the Russian picture.

They will create a realistic understanding of U. S.–Soviet relations, as an indispensable step toward peace.



Says Mr. Dulles: "None of us likes to face up to a new major international problem just when, by victory over Germany and Japan, we feel we have earned the right to a period of relaxation.

"None of us likes to admit of danger coming from a nation which made an outstanding contribution to that victory."

But he points out: "Soviet leaders assume that peace and security depend upon quickly achieving world-wide acceptance of Soviet political philosophy, which suppresses certain personal freedoms in the interest of achieving social harmony.

"The personal freedoms which they would take away constitute our most cherished political and religious heritage.

"The methods which Soviet leaders use are repugnant to our ideas of humanity and fair play . . . Soviet leaders now seek to do on a world-wide basis what they have done at home."

Into what three zones does Russia divide the world? What different techniques are used to advance Soviet policies in each of these zones? In which zones is there a present conflict between Russia and America? And what are the great strengths, but greater weaknesses, of Russia's "iron curtain" that separates her from the world? John Foster Dulles gives the answers in LIFE for June 3.

How can we avoid war without surrender of American beliefs and ideals? What does Mr. Dulles recommend as a program that probably can cause a change in Soviet policies? How can the United Nations become an active force in improving relations among the "Big Three"? What can the U.N. do to prevent the "mistakes in judgment" that are the usual causes of war? Watch for Mr. Dulles' second article in LIFE, June 10.

Public Printer Grants Pay Increases to 4000

GPO: Public Printer Giegengack has ordered pay raises for 4000 of his employes on July 1. These employes will get 14 per cent with a minimum of $250, the identical raise to be given Classification Act employes on the same date.

Klutz

Covered in the raise are clerical workers, skilled laborers, and a few mechanical employes. In fact, all employes whose salaries aren't fixed by negotiation as provided in the Keiss Act. The law gives the public printer sole authority to set wages for the 4000 employes.

The salaries of the remaining 3000—mainly printers, pressmen, platemakers, and bookbinders—are fixed by negotiation. These employes are certain to get a substantial increase on October 15. They must wait until then as they were given a raise on that date last year and the law allows only one pay boost a year.

STORY: A friend of mine was doing some hot weather reading the other day—the phone book—and he ran into this interesting item on Page 715. The last listing in column three on that page is: "Hospital for the Insane." Then in small type it says: "continued—see next column." And at the beginning of the next column—the continuation—the listing is: "House of Representatives—U. S."

UNRRA: The new starting pay scales which went into effect Saturday at United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation are as follows:

Grade 1, $1810; 2, $2050; 3, $2250; 4, $2450; 5, $2700; 6, $3100; 7, $3500; 8, $3900; 9, $4400; 10, $5000; 11, $5750; 12, $6950; 13, $8100; 14, $9350, and 15, $10,500.

The employes will average an increase slightly more than the 14 per cent which will be given Federal workers on July 1. In the lower grades, the UNRRA scale runs about $100 higher than the Federal scale, and up to $500 more in the top brackets.

CONGRESS: Bob Laughlin, a former FBI agent and a good one, will resign as chief of the investigating staff of the House Appropriations Committee. He will head the Chicago office of the new group that has been set up by horse racing interests to investigate racketeering at the tracks.

RETIREMENT: Another hearing on the Forand bill is slated tentatively for full annuities regardless of age.

Meantime, Chairman Randolph of the House Civil Service Committee, will go before the House Rules Committee to seek an okay to bring up the Morse bill which would permit employes who were retired prior to January, 1942, to get the higher pension rate now in effect.

Incidentally, several House Civil Service Committee members are threatening to object to the Magnuson-DeLacy Navy seniority bill when it is brought up on the House floor. They will insist that it be referred to their committee.

CHANGE: Don't be surprised if there is a change soon in the chairmanship of the House Civil Service Committee. In congressional corridors it's reported: That Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House Labor Committee, will either resign or refuse to run for reelection because of her health; that Randolph will succeed her as labor committee chairman, and that another able man, Representative Henry Jackson of Washington, will move up to the Civil Service job.

COMMERCE: The House Appropriations Committee is said to be drafting an adverse report on the proposal of Secretary Wallace that he do his bit to get the Government out of business by selling the Inland Waterways Corp., a barge line, to private interests.

SOCIAL SECURITY: Arthur Altmeyer has been offered the job of assistant secretary in the proposed Department of Welfare. His, and the jobs of other Social Security Board members, would be abolished by the President's reorganization plans.

The plans, though notoriously weak, have stirred up opposition in Congress and the Senate Judiciary Committee has made adverse reports on each of the three plans. The opposition sprung mainly from the proposals to abolish the SSB and Employes Compensation Commission. Officials in both agencies are reported to be working openly against the plans.

LABOR: In this department there seems to be growing opposition over the plan to transfer the Children's Bureau to Federal Security. And some open fighting is being done on this plan, too. The story is told that Children's Bureau—admittedly well-operated—would be wiped out as a unit if the transfer is made. This is the story of woe:

That child labor inspection work would be kept in the department and be transferred to the Wage and Hour Division; that once the bureau gets in Federal Security that its health work will go to the Public Health Service, and that it will lose its grants-in-aid to the front office and about all it would have left would be its name and a desk. Maybe it's just a story.

Ellicott City Man Slain; Suspect Held

Maryland State Police yesterday charged Robert Sealock, 47, of Savage, Md., with the murder of John William Sexton, 36, of Ellicott City.

Sexton, the father of three children, was shot in the abdomen late Saturday night and died a half hour later in an ambulance en route to a Baltimore hospital.

Police said the shooting took place on the front porch of Sealock's residence after an argument over a drink of whiskey. One shot was fired, police said.

Sexton had been employed on the farm of Donald R. Sewell at Ellicott City for the past two months. Sewell said he loaned Sexton a truck Saturday night to do some marketing for his family, who lived at the Sewell farm.

A preliminary hearing will be held tomorrow before Judge J. Edwin Haslup at Savage, Md.

Escape Attempt Fails At Lorton Reformatory

Officials at the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va., yesterday reported that an attempted escape there Saturday night was thwarted when a guard's shot wounded James F. Lopez, 25.

Lopez, committed to the reformatory March 8, left a line of inmates marching from the movie auditorium at 10 p. m., it was reported, and crawled across the baseball diamond on his stomach.

When he attempted to climb over the railroad tracks, alongside the reformatory, officials said, he was spotted by Tower Guard Arthur Rector.

Rector opened fire, hitting Lopez in the upper right arm and he was apprehended. Lopez who is married and has one child, was sentenced to 1 to 3 years for auto theft here.

2 Dads Shared First Honors In 1945 Contest

Four little girls were sure their father would be the "pin-up daddy of 1945."

Three little boys were sure their father was "the best dad there is."

And all seven youngsters were right. For last year The Post's Ideal Father Contest had two dad winners. So excellent were the two letters that vied for first place among the host of letters received during the contest that the newsroom judges at The Post had to declare the contest a draw.

So Willmore T. Pyles, 1037 Irving st. ne., father of four girls, and William Shores Harris, 4001 25th rd. N., Arlington, father of three boys, each received Ideal Father Plaques from The Post. Families of both men were treated to dinners at the Statler and to box seats at a show.

The letter of the three Harris boys—Billy, Donny and Jimmy—began:

"My dad is the best dad there is. He has three boys and he says he wants a ball team. He never fusses at us. We always know he means what he says. In summer he takes me on hikes and tells me about trees and birds. In the fall we go to the mountains and I shoot my BB gun."

The Pyles sisters, all students at Noyes Elementary School, wrote:

"Our daddy made us a real playground in our back yard so we wouldn't have to go in the street and perhaps get hurt. . . . If it hadn't been for our daddy we wouldn't have won second prize in the back-yard playground contest for which we were all very proud and were awarded another seesaw."

This year again, Washington youngsters have a chance to point out what fine fathers they have. They may enter The Post's "Ideal Father Contest" simply by addressing a letter explaining about their dads to the Ideal Father Editor, The Washington Post, Washington, 4, D. C.

Winner in the contest and his family will be guests of The Post for a dinner and a show, and the youngster who writes the best letter and his dad will be interviewed over Station WINX on Father's Day.

The contest closes June 12, so letters must be postmarked no later than June 11. The winner will be announced on June 14.

Hospital Fund Aided by Boy In Iron Lung

A 10-year-old infantile paralysis victim in an iron lung is one of countless humble givers who are pitching in to help Children's Hospital get a new building.

Hospital authorities, who are seeking a $1,300,000 building fund in a current drive, said that Joe Justh, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Justh, 714 Decatur st. nw., insisted on turning over $10 in pennies, nickels and dimes which he had saved in a fish-bowl bank.

Joe has lived in an iron lung at Children's Hospital for the last 16 months because of an infantile paralysis attack suffered during the 1944 epidemic.

Equally eager to help was a group of crippled children whose expenses are paid by the Kiwanis Club, officers said. They turned over $45 of their personal savings for the building fund, which now totals $596,000, or 45.8 per cent of the goal.

Another contributor was a man who could not afford to pay for treatment which his young son received at the hospital many years ago. A $50 check for the building fund was accompanied by the father's declaration to the effect that, "I made a vow that I would repay the hospital if I ever could. My boy is grown now and the time has come when I can pay up."

Building campaign workers said that only 2291 contributors are responsible for the $596,000 collected thus far, however. They have extended the drive in the hope that a 100 per cent goal can be reported at a "victory" dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, June 25.

Campaigners will make progress reports on collections at a luncheon at the hotel on Wednesday, and at other luncheons on June 11 and June 20.

Area 'Kids,' From 6 to 60, Thrilled as Circus Unloads

Thousands of District "kids"—ranging from 6 to 60—trouped out to Northeast Washington yesterday to witness the arrival of the "biggest show on earth."

The circus is in town.

Under a cloudy sky they ambled around in mud puddles at the show grounds at 26th st. and Benning rd. ne., as Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey workmen methodically went about the magic of changing overnight the barren acres to a place of thrills and excitement.

The grounds, flecked with the color of red and yellow gas balloons, and covered with brightly painted wagons, almost at once took on something of a festive air despite the chill damp breeze.

Bad weather and "a slow start from Philadelphia" had delayed things in the morning, but by afternoon four red and gold circus trains were speedily unloaded while hundreds watched from the Benning Bridge.

The whole circus movement is one of precision and timing. Dappled grays pulled the wagons from the flatcars after which they were towed to the show grounds by trucks. There, tractors took over to haul the gaily-colored wagons to their assigned positions.

First to go up was the cookhouse, a big tent to feed the show's 1500 people.

Meanwhile, an automatic stake driver layed out the outline of the "big top," the menagerie and the side show. The fireproofed "big top," said to be the biggest tent in the world, is capable of seating 11,500 people.

Circus parades are a thing of the past. The last one was held in 1920, Frank Braden, publicity man, said. Yesterday the only approach to a parade was the elephants walking from the train to the grounds, followed by a small army of cheering children.

Wide-eyed kids carefully inspected canvas-covered wagons; gawked at elephants and sat on sawdust bales wishing for something to happen.

Scurrying midgets fascinated the children—and most of the grown-ups, too, when it was learned many of the "little people" had returned to the "ring" after four years of war work as welders.

The show will open today with the first performance scheduled for 3:15 p. m. The evening show starts at 8:15 p. m. The circus will be in town through Saturday. Tickets are being sold on the grounds and reserved seats can be purchased at the AAA, Pennsylvania ave. and 17th st. nw.

Church Music Head Honored On 25th Year at Mt. Vernon

Sixty-one-year-old R. Deane Shure, who began composing music at the age of eight, joined friends last night to celebrate his twenty-fifth anniversary as music director of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

R. Deane Shure

Admirers filled the 1100-seat capacity auditorium and 350 more persons overflowed into the basement to listen to a program of his music.

Two hundred voices sang his songs. Among Shure's compositions sung were, "Prayer Abiding," "O Silent Hills" and "Comfort Ye."

Two famous church musicians, Dr. Clarence Dickinson and Dr. T. Tertius Noble joined with Mount Vernon Methodist Church in paying tribute to the composer.

Dr. Dickinson, from the School of Sacred Music, Union Theological Seminary, and Dr. Noble, organist of St. Thomas Cathedral, both of New York, aided Shure in conducting the various choirs of the church.

The fact that Mount Vernon Place Church now boasts six fine choirs made up of 200 voices and including Sanctuary, Cloister, Angelus, A capella, Chapel, Carol, and Chancel Choirs was perhaps the best tribute to the composer.

Shure, who lives at 8 Pine st., Takoma Park, Md., said during a pause in the proceedings that he does most of his writing in the morning or late at night.

He was born in Chillisquaque, Pa., and began studying music composition at 12. At eight he wrote a piece for a mandolin club.

23,000 Red Cross Workers Trained For War Service

The Red Cross trained more than 23,000 men and women for service to the armed forces both at home and overseas.

National headquarters announced yesterday that hospital workers constituted the largest group. More than 8000 professional medical and psychiatric case workers, recreation workers and clerical staffs were trained for duty with the Army and Navy, officials disclosed.

Ft. Meade GI Held On Morals Charge

A 25-year-old soldier from Fort Meade was being held by Maryland police yesterday after he had allegedly attempted to rape "a pretty blonde" girl near Laurel, Md.

Police said the soldier grabbed the girl as she was walking down the highway near Laurel shortly after midnight yesterday. He was charged with assault and intent to rape.

5 Veteran Groups Start Drive for Housing Labor

Apprentice Training Expansion Will Be Coupled With Move

The Nation's five major veterans organizations yesterday announced a united effort to break the labor bottleneck in housing.

In a statement made through their Veterans Advisory Council to Housing Expediter Wilson Wyatt, they called for an "all-out" community-by-community drive to channel construction labor into house building.

The drive, aimed at recruiting laborers and expanding apprentice training where needed, was announced by representatives of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, American Veterans of World War II and the the American Veterans Committee.

Veterans Held Victimized

Their effort to reach the goal of 2,700,000 houses in two years called for in the Veterans Housing Program was impelled, they declared, by the fact that the "housing situation will undoubtedly grow worse during the next few months as rapid demobilization continues."

At the same time the joint statement was made, Joseph M. Stack, national commander of the VFW, charged that the Veterans Housing Program has "bogged down" throughout the Nation, with portions of the construction industry "taking shameless advantage of the returned veteran and his family."

Stack's declaration, in a letter to John D. Small, civilian production administrator, added:

"Our senior vice commander in chief, Louis E. Starr, of Portland, Oreg., estimates, following a survey in Oregon, that 75 per cent of the building materials produced in that productive area go from the source of production into nonhousing channels."

Labor Is Problem

Small answered the charge by pointing out that only last week he ordered a cut in nonhousing construction that would channel another one million dollars' worth of building materials into the housing program. He said new housing and maintenance and repair of housing now takes two thirds of all materials.

(On May 29, CPA ordered all field offices to slash nonhousing construction by two thirds; with a review of the order to come within 45 days to determine if it could be relaxed.)

The Veterans Advisory Council's statement added that "arrangements are already under way to channel the distribution of building materials. This turns our attention to the other phase of the supply problem, the labor needed to get the job done."

Legislative Delays Hit

Hitting at "the time lost by delays" in legislating the veterans' housing program, the coupcil stressed the urgency of these veterans' aids to housing:

1. Veterans' organizations should obtain representation on various local committees to evaluate the need of workers.

2. United States Employment Service offices should furnish information on labor needs; qualified veterans should be given every opportunity to obtain employment as they can be used; veterans should alert official agencies, labor groups and contractors to speed or enlarge apprentice training.

3. Every effort should be made to obtain sufficient off-site labor, in woods, mills, brickyards, in addition to on-site labor.

Group Efforts Suggested

4. Where insufficient organization exists to pool information on labor, veterans should take a lead to organize such community groups and stimulate hiring and training of veteran labor.

In support of the council's declaration, the American Legion announced yesterday that it was calling on its membership of three million to "make sure that veterans have genuine representation on all local mayor's housing committees" and implement the labor recruiting program.

American Legion Commander John Stelle proposed that where actual labor shortages exist, "veterans might form themselves into groups of 20 or so to put up their own prefabricated houses if they do so under the guidance of an expert and if this action does not conflict with union labor."

Spot-Interview Opinions On Teacher Pay Increases

(District residents interviewed by The Post Poll were assured that their names would not be divulged. The comments below come from spot interviews with other citizens, who were questioned at the National Gallery of Art.)

Whether District teachers should get a salary raise is "hardly a question," according to Miss Beverly Puppa, an Army Map Service employe of Brookmont, Md. Miss Puppa said she thought the proposed raise is a "splendid idea."

Beverly Puppa

"Certainly," she added, "teachers should be paid in comparison with salaries paid to Government workers. And that should be at least $2400 per year, in consideration of the responsibilities and duties which teachers have. However," she explained, "I don't think the high school scale of pay for teachers should be higher than the scale of pay for elementary teachers. I don't see any reason for a pay differential there."

* * * *

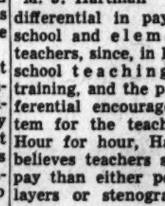
Mrs. Julian H. Cohn of 2547 29th st. nw., a housewife, also was flatly in favor of a salary increase for teachers. "Their salaries are much too low for the present cost of living. Why, domestic help gets that much now, and they are untrained people. I certainly think that if we put enough trust in teachers to ask them to educate our children, we ought to be willing to pay them better salaries.

Mrs. Cohn

"I think teachers should get at least $2600 a year, net. That would put their gross salary higher, in order to account for taxes," Mrs Cohn said. She said she sees no reason for a differential in the salaries paid high school and elementary school teachers.

* * * *

M. J. Hartman, 5034 Benning rd. se., Federal employe, declared himself as a "firm believer in the policy of getting teachers' salaries up to the point where people will be interested in taking teaching jobs. I have a child of my own. . . . I think teachers should get salaries of $3000 per year."



M. J. Hartman

Hartman declared he approved of the differential in pay between high school and elementary school teachers, since, in his opinion, high school teaching requires more training, and the payment of a differential encourages a merit system for the teachers themselves. Hour for hour, Hartman said, he believes teachers should get more pay than either policemen, bricklayers or stenographers. But he declared he believed more training is required of lawyers and nurses, and that therefore their pay scale should exceed that of teachers.

* * * *

"Teachers' salaries definitely should be raised," in the opinion of S. Rabkin, of 4536 28th st. nw., a Government attorney. "In terms of specialized training, we expect good teachers, but in terms of remuneration for that training, teachers are grossly underpaid."

S. Rabkin

Rabkin declared that in view of present living costs, he believed teachers should receive $3000, and that he definitely approved of the differential in pay between high school and elementary school teachers. High school teachers, in Rabkin's opinion, have a heavier responsibility, since students of high school age are most susceptible to teachers' influence, while those in elementary grades are more susceptible to parental influence.

* * * *

Mrs. Thomas M. Hoyle, 4935 46th st. nw., also a Government worker, shared the opinions of others that teachers' salaries should be raised. "They certainly should get more money. What they are making now is hardly a living wage," she said. "I believe their salaries should range from $2400 to $3000, but I do believe that a differential in pay between high school and grade school teachers is probably a good thing. It's considered a greater honor to be a high school teacher." Mrs. Hoyle said she believed that on an hour-for-hour basis, teachers should receive higher compensation than policemen, bricklayers or stenographers, but lower than registered nurses or lawyers.

Mrs. Hoyle

* * * *

Miss Alese Scott, of Rapidan, Va., a teacher in the secondary schools of Culpeper County, Va., said "You really don't have to ask me about teachers' salaries. Of course, I think an increase is a very sound idea.

Alese Scott

"I think, as a matter of fact, that teachers should be paid as well as possible, and see no harm in setting a $3000 per year minimum, without a differential. In my opinion, the duties of high school and elementary teachers are much the same. I believe that if anything, we should put more emphasis on the secondary schools."

* * * *

Present salaries of teachers are "high enough," however according to Frank Gurule, 220 Randolph pl. ne., who is general manager of the Steak and Shake Shoppes. "These teachers are being paid all they are worth for the kind of instruction students are receiving today. I don't see how they are worth any more," he said.

Frank Gurule

Gurule explained that he thought teachers should be giving students more vocational training and more lessons in "independence and self-reliance." Now they dish out a lot of useless information like sociology and a lot of people get the idea that they will let the Government support them, he said. "I'm 100 per cent for education," he insisted, "but there is no reason to pay higher teacher salaries under the present teaching system."

K. of C. Holds Special Picnic for Children's Home

The Knights of Columbus gave a special picnic party yesterday.

Using their cars, members of the organization took 74 girls from St. Vincent's Home, 4th and Channing sts. ne., over to St. Joseph's Home, Eastern ave. and Bunker Hill rd. ne., where they were met by 74 boys.

The children, many of whom are orphans, aged 6 to 14 years, played games, followed by a picnic supper and movie later in the afternoon.

In charge of the affair, held twice a year by the Knights of Columbus, was Dick Mahar and Alfred A. McGarraghy.

Postlude

Mrs. Hansel Scores in Recital Of Works by Contemporaries

By Betsy Winter

Katherine Dobbs Hansel, young resident soprano, gave a song recital at the Phillips Memorial Gallery yesterday afternoon that was distinguished both for the taste and imagination of her program and its delivery. She is one of the few singers heard here who has had the courage to give a program made up entirely of works by her contemporaries, both foreign and native.

Mrs. Hansel has a voice of exceptionally lovely quality, particularly in the upper register, and it is often reminiscent of the great Maggie Teyte's. The tones in the lower register, however, were not so well placed and were often muffled. Her diction was not always as clear as could be desired and at times she had a tendency to mouth her words. There was also a frequent lack of tonal subtlety and variation in her delivery. These are all details which will correct themselves, however, as she matures, for there can be no question of her sincerity and ability as an artist.

Represented on her program was a song by Licinio Refice, a group of German lieder by Joseph Marx, and two attractive French songs by Eric Bovet, who was present in the audience and took a well-deserved bow. No one is more skilled at writing charming song settings than local composer Mary Howe, as was illustrated again yesterday when Mrs. Hansel sang four of her pieces, including "White Snow," "Elegy," "Fair Annet" and "O Porsperina." Two songs by David Diamond, young American composer, were small masterpieces in the art song form. He is one of the most significant men in American creative music today. Songs by Ernst Bacon and David Van Vactor completed the program.

Mozart held the spotlight at the National Gallery last night when the National Gallery Sinfonietta, under Conductor Richard Bales, presented Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E flat major. Second half of the program was devoted to his Requiem Mass in C minor in which Sinfonietta was assisted by the CathedralChoral Society. This was a repetition of the performance which won such high praise at the National Cathedral last Wednesday night and the same principals took part.

Nails and Wire Fill a Lady's Luggage; A King Adds Laurel to His Crown

MR. AND MRS. Hugh Cumming, jr., entertained at dinner the other evening as a farewell for popular Baroness van Boetzelaer, who is soon leaving Washington on the first lap of her journey to join her husband in Holland.

Baron van Boetzelaer, who until April was Minister of the Netherlands Embassy here, is already established in Holland. Before joining him, the Baroness and their children will spend part of the summer in New England.

For Baroness van Boetzelaer, packing has assumed the charm of a gigantic puzzle. There are things to be sent to their New England cottage, things to be sent to Holland, and things to be kept at hand. To add to the complications, the luggage for Holland contains such dainty items as house paint, wire, nails, and other things that are needed to repair the Van Boetzelaers' house after the ravages of war.

AND, speaking of former Washington diplomats, Chevy Chase Club took a beating at tennis not long ago in faraway Sweden when Wollmar Bostrum, one of the club's best players, and former Swedish Minister in the Capital, played a doubles match against 87-year-old King Gustav of Sweden.

True, it was only a one set match so the "staying power" of Mr. Bostrom didn't have a chance to assert itself. But it was the King's first time out after an attack of influenza! And, anyhow, try that on YOUR tennis-court when you're 87!

MISS Alice Dodge gave a very pleasant cocktail party recently at her attractive house in Georgetown.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Doeller, whose parties are always tops and much appreciated, were hosts at cocktails and at a dinner celebrating Mrs. Doeller's birthday.

WE Americans always love a wisecrack, especially when it is at the expense of someone else and a maker of wise cracks is always popular. So, I expect that Lord Inverchapel, the new British Ambassador to our shores, will be popular with the American public.

He stepped off the Queen Mary after a crowded voyage among English war brides of Canadian soldiers and their babies with the remark that "British children are always good-looking! It's only when they grow up that they become ugly!"

All of which reminds me of the famous wisecrack (French division) made by Anatole France about British women. He said, "When they are beautiful, they are beautiful as angels! But when they are ugly they don't know where to stop!"

Arnold Estate Is Gay Setting For Barbecue

Several guests from Washington motored out to the Virginia estate of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Arnold Saturday for a barbecue supper and dance in honor of Miss Dorothy Lee Counselman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Counselman of Bradley Farms, Md., who will be married June 19 to Lieut. John Thomas.

He is son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Thomas of Sandy Spring, Md.

Miss Counselman was graduated Saturday from Trinity College and many of her classmates were on the guest list.

Older friends of the Counselman and Arnold families completed the group, which numbered about 70. After supper, served around the barbecue pits, guests went inside for dancing, music and a program that featured a group of singers.

Among those in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. James Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Maguire, Miss Mary Hayden, Miss Jane O'B[illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Gruber, [illegible] and Mrs. Daniel Ball, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Locker—Barron

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hendricks Major of Nashville announce the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Mary Grace Locker, to Lieut. Gilbert Barron, USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ellis Barron of San Diego, Calif.

Lieutenant Barron is a graduate of Stanford University and Temple University Medical School. He was resident physician at Highland Alameda County Hospital in Oakland when he entered the Navy. After service in the South Pacific, Lieutenant Barron was assigned to the Experimental Diving Unit in Washington, where he is now stationed. He will return to Highland Hospital in November.

The wedding is planned for late summer.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Veteran, 25, Whose Thoughts Turn Seriously To Future Since He's Back, Finds His Girl, Now 20, Still Insistent on Being Frivolous

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the last five years—except when I was in the Army and overseas,—I have been going with a girl who is now 20. I am 25. We've had lots of fun together and stored up many pleasant memories.

However, since I've returned from overseas, I find that I have become very settled, with my thoughts seriously fixed on the future. I guess I've always been more or less the quiet type,—but not to the point of being unpopular. I've always been able to mix with the gang.

I find my girl is still living in the era of her high school days,—a happy period which most of us hate to leave behind. I've showered her with all my love and admiration and I'm constantly telling her of the many things I have planned for us when we are married. But she doesn't seem very solicitous towards me.

He Isn't Sure She Loves Him

SHE FORGETS the little encouraging things, like talking about what kind of curtains she would like for the kitchen in our home, or taking my arm when we are out, or giving me an occasional glance which seems to say, "Gee, I'm glad you're mine." She very seldom will say that she loves me; and usually I have to ask her before she tells me.

When I speak to her about these things, she assures me that she will settle down eventually; and says I'm the man she really wants to marry. I've let her have her own way, mostly; have let her follow her own interests, which aren't very interesting to me—but fun to the bobby sox crowd, I guess.

I certainly wouldn't try to force her, nor would I even want her, to give up any good times before she's had her fill of fun. And I love her, regardless of her frivolous ways of thinking. But am I making a mistake? Can I be sure she really loves me? Or am I one of those necessary evils—somebody to count on, when she wants to spend a quiet evening? I would appreciate your candid opinion of all this. C. F.

Is She Moron Or a Coward?

DEAR C. F.: If, at 20 years of age, and after five years' very special friendship with you—which has always had marriage as its goal,—this girl is still wholly preoccupied with juvenile time-killing pursuits as her idea of "enjoyment of life," I think you are entitled to despair of her ever making a satisfactory helpmeet to you, who properly require sympathetic understanding and indorsement of your serious aspirations.

It would seem that either she is a case of "arrested development,"—i.e., someone who unconsciously draws back in fright from the prospect of quitting the home nest and the little-girl role. Or else she is just plain moron, who has already reached her maximum development, as to mental prowess and social vision,—and who would be just as "dumb Dora" if she settled down as she is giddy now in giving you the run-around.

Owing to your war experiences, plus the passage of time, plus the steady maturation of your naturally serious turn of mind, you have left her far behind, so far as "fund of interests" are concerned, I think. But because of the substantial earlier history of happy times together, plus a habit (or conditioned reflex) of dating her, plus the idea deeply ingrained in your monogamous mind that she would be your wife some day, you would (indeed do) find it very difficult to face the truth that she is a sharp disappointment, — now you're back, and grown up, and ready to marry.

They Are Bored With Each Other

I THINK that if you could objectively sift your true feelings to the bottom, you would find that you are just as bored with her company nowadays as she is with yours. And there can be no doubt that she finds you tedious. Her performance as described makes that clear. She is fond of you, of course,—for being "old faithful," closer than a brother. Just as you are fond of her, for old times' sake. But aside from that, there is no "tie that binds." Or that's how I see it,—and you've asked my candid opinion.

Are you making a mistake in smothering your preferences to humor her? Your deepest convictions say you are. I think it's time you spoke very bluntly and fully to her, about what you want and where she fails. Honest talk may provoke her to honest answer,—as to what she thinks of you, and what you can expect of her. That's the only way to get together—as you aren't now,—on a realistic basis for deciding "Are we right for each other? Or shall we call quits?" M. H.

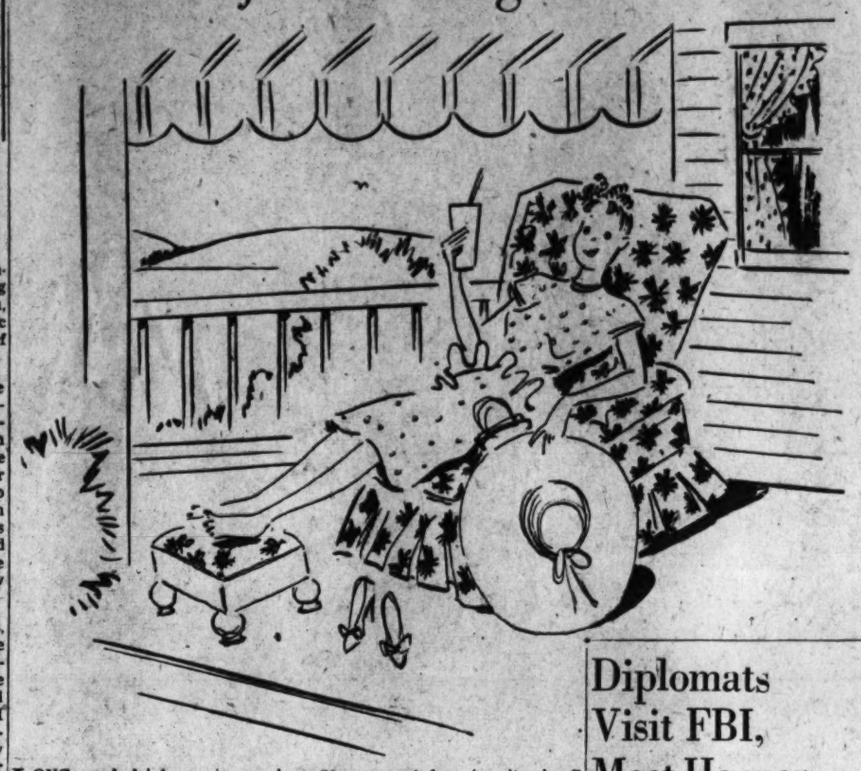
Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

It's Time for Tinkling Iced Drinks!



LONG, cool drinks again are in order to revive you after a busy day. Luckily we don't have to be too much concerned—as yet—about the ingredients that go into most iced drinks. Oranges, lemons and limes we have in good supply. Sugar being on the short side, it is best to use sirup or honey as the sweetening agent. When sugar is used it should be made into sirup so that every single grain will do its full duty.

Whenever I think of fahrenheit coolers for thirst quenchers, I recall the attractive, flavorsome iced drink that Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniels serves on her veranda. It is what I call a Royal Iced Tea. She serves this drink in blue glasses and the effect is brightened with fruit kabob with canned pineapple gems and topped with red maraschino cherries. This drink is as simple as it is delicious. Make it this way:

ROYAL ICED TEA

Prepare a pot of fresh black tea using 1 teaspoon of tea and a sprig of mint leaves to each cup of boiling water. In each tall tea glass use a fruit kabob made of canned pineapple gems, spoon-size pieces of fruit and maraschino cherries, placed alternately on a long cocktail pick. Rest the ends on the top of the glass. Fill glasses half full of crushed ice. For each glass combine two thirds cup canned unsweetened pineapple juice, 1 teaspoon sirup and 1 tablespoon lime juice. Pour mixture over ice in tall glasses. Garnish each with a sprig of mint.

Orange drinks are not only good but good for you. The vitamin C in which oranges abound actually mitigates the effects of heat. Scientists have discovered that exposure to high temperatures causes a 50 per cent loss in vitamin C from the body tissue and lowered vitamin C reserves go hand in hand with that tired feeling we get when it is hot.

To vary the regular glass of orange juice, make an Orange Quench. It is made this way:

ORANGE QUENCH

Combine ¾ cup milk, 1 teaspoon sugar, sirup or honey and ¼ cup orange juice. Beat until thoroughly blended. Serve chilled. To vary flavor ¼ teaspoon cinnamon may be added if a spicy flavor is liked.

PRUNE FLIP

Prune juice makes a fine drink and doesn't require any sweetening. This is one of those "gentle" drinks that are so good for us at times. Make by this recipe:

To 3 cups of chilled milk add 1 cup chilled prune juice. Beat thoroughly. Pour into chilled glasses and top with a few gratings of lemon or orange rind.

CLOVE LEMONADE

If you want a refreshing drink to keep on tap, make up a Clove Lemonade and store in refrigerator. Mix 1 pint water with 1½ cups lemon juice, 1 teaspoon of whole cloves and sweeten to taste. Bring to boil slowly and boil for 2 minutes. Cool and strain. Use 3 tablespoons of this mixture to each serving glass, filling up with water and ice. This drink may be kept indefinitely. Mint or lemon slices may be added to individual servings if desired.

Planes Ready To Track Path Of Hurricanes

By the Associated Press

The Army and Navy are ready to tie a warning bell to any hurricane that may roar out of the Caribbean.

Two flights of planes, equipped with the newest apparatus to chart the course of a storm and give long advance warning of its probable path, have just been shifted to operating fields in Florida for the purpose, the services said yesterday.

Beginning this month, hurricanes may be expetced at any time until December.

Army planes will use radar for the first time to locate the center of storms without actually undertaking to fly into them. The Navy said it was outfitted with improved radar apparatus.

Pooling their efforts, the Army, Navy and Weather Bureau have been able since 1944 to give warnings up to 48 hours before hurricanes struck in full force.

Hitherto they have had to operate behind a veil of wartime secrecy, but the advance notice to lash down anything that might blow away and send ships and aircraft to shelter has minimized damage all the way up the Atlantic Coast.

This year, as before, several daily flights are scheduled over the West Indies and far into the Atlantic, the area where huricanes are born. Some Army trips extend to Albrook Field, in the Panama Canal Zone.

Balcony Squatter Treks to New York

Clear Sense of Values Underlies Triumph of Old Vic Company

By Richard L. Coe

AS AN OLD second balcony sitter, acutely conscious of the financial plottings and physical discomforts of theater-going, this reporter returns from a trip to New York's visiting Old Vic Theater Company of London mindful of several matters other than the company's dramatic qualities.

Laurence Olivier

There is, in the first place, something remarkable in the group's success in playing five plays in repertory 3000 miles from its home base. Behind this lies an interesting complexity of finances, of which more in a moment.

But in the second place, and underlying the entire venture, is a clear and splendid sense of values, the lack of which has kept such a group from having a comparable success in our own country. Without a doubt many of these players could earn larger salaries than they do as members of an acting company. Laurence Olivier, for instance, is now getting about $400 a week; he could, and has, earned 10 times that in the movies or the commercial West End and Broadway theaters. All his associates aren't in quite the same class, to be sure, but Ralph Richardson and a half dozen others could be pulling down far more outside the company.

But money and fleeting fame are not what these players are after. They're actors and they want to act. They don't want to do the variations on one characterization that make so many potential players familiar puppets.

Only experience and the opportunity made possible by this sense of values enables Olivier to be the rumbling Hotspur one performance, a dried-up Justice Shallow the next, a crazed Sophoclean Oedipus on half a double bill and the foppish Critic of Sheridan 20 minutes later. One afternoon Ena Burill plays the tragic Jocasta, that evening she is the salty Mistress Quickly. Richardson's Falstaff gives way to a totally different Uncle Vanya and Nicholas Hannen's Henry IV is quite another fellow from his Greek Chorus Leader.

Miss Cornell and her company gave us some idea of these fascinations in alternating "Antigone" and "Candida" a few weeks ago. It is to be hoped that next fall's debut of the American Repertory Theater will allow the same versatilities. It seems very right indeed that Eva Le Gallienne is one of the leading lights of this group, she whose gallant Civic Repertory is remembered as our most lively try in this direction. Ultimately the Le Gallienne rep failed, but the economic cards were stacked against it.

The Long-Term Harvest

But, going back to the Old Vic company, it is the shrewd sense of values, weighing glamour against the long-term harvest, that has made possible its triumph. These players know what they want and with a single-mindedness of purpose that isn't always familiar in the theater, they've chosen.

How much longer the present company will work together only time can tell, but they are committed to London for another year and already have Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus" and Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" in the works. To insure its continuation the governing board's goal is always to find successors for its present headliners. Director John Burrell sums it up by saying:

"So far, an actor has never been given a satisfactory theatrical alternative to the lures of picture-making. We believe we can offer that. We believe that the kind of actor we want will prefer the opportunity we can give him for a life of continuing creativeness on the stage to the short-lived notoriety of a film career."

All this is neatly underscored outside New York's Century Theater, for which all tickets have been sold through the closing night of June 15. There the billing reads "The Old Vic Theatre Company" and, in smaller type, with all in uniform size, the names of the players. The team doesn't admit there's a star in the lineup.

Non-Profit Venture

How the company made its spectacular leap across the water is an interesting financial yarn. It's a non-profit engagement, similar to its prewar trips to Denmark, Egypt and the Mediterranean area. In an effort to be impartial as to sponsors, such firms as the Theatre Guild, the Playwrights' Company, Gilbert Miller, Billy Rose and the new American repertory group under Cheryl Crawford were approached, but all turned it down.

Theater Incorporated, in its first producing year proprietors of Gertrude Lawrence's successful "Pygmalion," grabbed the opportunity to sponsor the visitors, putting up $25,000 to a total of $100,000, remainder of which was given by Cornelius V. Whitney, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Julius Fleischmann, William S. Paley and Joseph Verner Reed.

This covered such preproduction costs as flying the acting company of 30 and a crew of 15 department heads from England, bringing scenery for the five plays over on the Queen Mary and financing a week of rehearsals. This advance money was paid back without interest from the first boxoffice receipts.

Then, the staff's obliging Walter Alfrord tells us, there is a budget of $100,000 for operating expenses, both backstage and out front. On a percentage basis, the theater rent is $75,000 for seven weeks, including one of rehearsals.

Our National's Better!

Financing this total outlay of $275,000 are the Century Theater's 1689 seats (our E street National seats 1680, by the way, and as a balcony-occupant of both theaters, we can assure you the National's top balcony is far nearer the stage than a like location in the sprawling Century). The way the seats are scaled for the Century, this means a possible intake of $280,000 in six weeks of total sellouts, out of which must come the inevitable "comps" for first-night lists.

To our complaint that our three-buck seats didn't give us anything like the view we'd had at half the price in either the Old Vic's original home (now bombed) or its present West End headquarters, seating just under 1000, the only answer is we saved our trans-Atlantic fare.

The complications of playing different plays at different performances add considerably to the stage crew bills. Changing sets of "Henry IV" productions to the double bill, for instance, involves a three-hour minimum call for all stage hands. The London musical scores are orchestrated for 18 and so you find 18 New York musicians in the pit and should a performance run overtime, all must be paid accordingly.

As for the actors, they get from five to 10 bucks extra a day for living expenses added to their regular salaries. On their U. S. earnings, they pay two income taxes, here and in England.

When Love Is Young

A SOLDIER and his wife, Mark Stevens and Joan Fontaine, look at each other—and life—in "From This Day Forward," now decorating the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. Adapted from Thomas Bell's "All Brides Are Beautiful," the film also enlists the services of Rosemary De Camp, Arline Judge, Henry Morgan, Queenie Smith and others of competence

LEONARD LYONS

Gossip From Gotham

New York, June 2.—The last report about "Gurrah" Shapiro, partner of the late Public Enemy No. 1 Lepke, were that he is suffering from a serious ailment and probably will not leave the Federal jail alive. "Gurrah" was an arrogant strong-arm man possessed of unusual vanity, even for a mobster. He was hunted for many months and avoided capture despite diligent search and high reward offered by the Federal officials. He finally surrendered, but not without one gesture of vanity. He loitered in front of the Federal Building, waited until he saw two Federal men about to enter, stopped them and asked "Got a match" One of them gave him a package of matches. The most-hunted man in America struck the match, paused while the flame flickered and revealed his face, returned the matches to the Federal men, then walked into the building and surrendered.

Billy Rose

Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe is the only nightclub venture of his which has had no peep-show or sideline gimmicks. He installed sirens at the bottom of a wishing well at his Music Hall, mermaids in a fish bowl at the Casino de Paree, and a lie-detector machine at the Casa Manana. The owner of the lie-detector machine persuaded Rose to inscall it by testing it on Billy. "This pendulum swings back and forth if the truth isn't being told," he said to Rose—who then seated himself in the chair, and submitted to the test. "Are you a modest man?" Rose was asked. He answered "yes," and the pendulum's violent swinging almost broke the machine.

The surprise of the London drama season this year was the disappointing reception accorded Thornton Wilder's "Our Town." This is the play which won the Pulitzer Prize here. Jed Harris, who produced it, nursed it carefully toward the Pulitzer Prize. His correspondence with Frank Craven, in which the producer assured the star that if at any time Craven didn't believe this was the best play in America he could leave the cast, now is preserved at the Yale library . . . During the run of the play, Craven became ill one day and the papers announced that Jed Harris would substitute for that one performance. But the show, instead, was canceled that one day. For Harris learned that in the audience, in their official capacity, were to be two judges of the Pulitzer Prize Committee.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

MEMBERS of the Ku Klux Klan have been sending me anonymous letters threatening all sorts of dire punishment if I continue to report on their fly-by-night activity. They seem to be laboring under the impression that not only can they strike terror into the hearts of defenseless minority groups, but also enjoy torturing others without even being written up in the newspapers.

At their Stone Mountain cross-burning, these brazen boys of the cotton nightshirt actually set themselves up as sole arbiters as to who should take news photos, and manhandled all photographers except those working for Henry Luce's Life Magazine. This kind of choosiness as to what is going to be written or published about an organization is a prerogative not even reserved for John L. Lewis.

So long as this typewriter has a ribbon, it will continue to expose the nightshirt boys despite threats to bump off the operator. Here is more inside news on the Ku Klux Klan's revival:

ATLANTA, GA.—Biggest meeting since the war was staged by Chapter No. 1, Atlanta, immediately after the May 9 Stone Mountain cross-burning. Two hundred fifty members present. Some were pretty sore over the unfavorable publicity, but gloated over fact that they had signed up new klansmen from Atlanta firemen and police.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—Klan recently burned cross in front of Jewish drugstore in the middle of town, warning that Jews must pack up and get out. J. B. Stoner, head of the Klan there, continues to peddle copies of the anti-Semitic book, "Protocols of the Elders of Zion."

KNOXVILLE, TENN. — An open meeting of the Klan was held May 18 at the tabernacle of Evangelist T. Wesley Hills. Principal speaker was the Rev. A. A. Haggard of Maryville, Tenn. This Klan meeting had something of emotional, almost fanatical fervor. The crowd was whipped up with the idea that the Church, the Klan and God all had the same goals and ideas. This is the latest and most dangerous line taken by Klan leaders.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—Klansmen now whisper that it was a knight of the KKK who snipped the wires during the broadcast of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, as Green was about to announce an AFL drive to organize the South. This illustrates another new KKK line—save America from organized labor and communism.

In most cities, leading ministers and newspapers have been strong in their denunciation of the Klan. The Southern Baptist Convention also went on record vigorously against the nightshirt boys. Despite this they seem to be making headway.

Truman's Labor Dilemma

ONLY three people knew about it, but last week President Truman was about convinced that he should withdraw his request for drastic legislation to curb strikes. This was before the Senate voted to reject the work-or-draft clause in the emergency labor bill.

"You've got something there," Truman told Senators Joe O'Mahoney and Burt Wheeler of Montana, who urged that he withdraw his demands of the previous week.

"Your arguments make sense and I will give them very earnest consideration," the President added.

The two Western Senators had pointed out that the two major strikes—coal and the railroads—were already just about settled, and that the maritime strike could be handled very simply by ordering the Navy to take over the ships.

"The best thing to do," O'Mahoney argued, "is to pull back this drastic bill you asked for Saturday as an emergency measure. The emergency is past, and it's bound to hurt you and hurt labor. If new labor legislation is needed, why don't we wait for the completion of the very exhaustive investigation of national labor-management relations that Congress has voted?"

The two Senators were cheered with the reception they received from their old friend, the former Senator from Missouri. They knew the strong influence exerted by reactionary White House advisers, but they figured that they had Truman just about won over.

But as they opened the door to leave the President's office, their optimism evaporated. For, waiting to see Truman as they left were reactionary John Snyder and George Allen, director of Republic Steel and a dozen other big corporations.

O'Mahoney's and Wheeler's sudden fears were justified. Truman did not withdraw his labor legislation; instead suffered a defeat in the Senate.

Note—The late Carter Glass of Virginia had no great love for labor. But in death he did a favor for labor which he never would have done in life. For when the Senate adjourned one day in respect to Glass, it gave just enough time for enough Senators to think twice about the work-or-draft clause and later to defeat it.

Navy Widows

THE U. S. Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md., is the happy health resort of oldsters in Congress and the Cabinet. They flock in and out as if it were their second home. Senator McKellar of Tennessee was taken there recently; Cordell Hull lived there nearly a year; Senator Reed of Kansas, when going in for a check-up, complained bitterly because a war-weary staff did not have someone available to carry his suitcase.

Scarcely a week goes by that a Congressman, Senator or Cabinet officer does not make use of the hospital. While no one begrudges them this expert medical attention, families of veterans are beginning to wonder why the orphans of men killed in the war should be barred from Naval hospitals.

Not only in Washington, but throughout the country, the orphans of Navy veterans can't get attention at naval hospitals. For instance, Mrs. Virginia Dillow of National City, Calif., whose husband was lost on the Submarine S44, December 4, 1943, tried to get one of her two small children into the San Diego Naval Hospital, but was refused. She received a $100 payment from the Government in January, but not a cent more. Her doctor, J. Gerald Hocklin, has been trying to help her, but not the hospital of the Navy for which her husband gave his life.

Note — At Fort Washington, Md., just 20 minutes from the Capitol, is a half-empty veterans hospital, which costs the taxpayers $211 a day per veteran for upkeep. Perhaps unification of Army, Navy and veterans hospitals could rectify some of these inequalities.

Capital Chaff

The exit of young men continues. Josiah Dubois, one of Secretary Vinson's crack assistants, has resigned to practice law here and in Camden, N. J. . . . Secretary of the Interior Cap Krug ended a six-hour fishing trip in the Virgin Islands with a painful sunburn, then proceeded to sweat out 12 days of hotter negotiations with John L. Lewis.

DUET FIGHTS AGVA. Herb Sachs, owner of the Club Duet, whose opinion of the Associated Guild of Vaudeville Artists covers a page in Variety, is taking further action. He's not booking any more floor shows after the current one closes on Wednesday. Which is no idle gesture since some of the most expensive acts in the country have been appearing at the Duet . . . Mr. Sachs points out that he paid his cheapest acts three times the AGVA minimum, that if he let out an act after one night he paid a full two weeks' salary without quibble, that he wants to run his own business in his own way. He wound up his Variety screed by saying, "Personally, this goose is laying no more golden eggs."

Pittsburgh niteries presented no floor shows during May because of disputes with AGVA. The deadlock was broken by booking agents agreeing to assume the burdens of the AGVA demands. At that, some of the bigger spots are in no hurry to resume floor shows, it is said.

The Club Duet, in the meantime, will probably get along very nicely with Bob Knight's orchestra, La Nelle's songs and the Baer Trio.

Venus Ramey, last year's "Miss America," will head the new Trade Winds show starting Wednesday. Other stars will be flamenca dancers Carmen Rivera and Bel Monte, Sonny Sparks who is a junior Ray Bolger.

THESE SMART GIRLS. Ann Hayden will debut as a band singer tonight in the Metronome Room with Paul Kain. She's a niece of Phil Hayden, the dance instructor; is mighty purty (see picture). . . . Two new Lotusettes have been added to the Lotus picture. They're Jan Spore, former Earle Theater Roxyette and

Ann Hayden

Metronome Room recently with the USO's "Girl Crazy," and Betty Nicholson, pretty Washington lass, who's rehearsed with the line a couple of months. . . . Margie Oare, the slender, tender 'n' tall vocal queen of Treasure Island, has been investing so much cash in summer evening gowns that she's thinking of getting out a bond issue.

The Arthur Murray Dancers plus their hobby horses that are always good for roaring fun, will move into the Pall Mall Room tonight as a special attraction. C'mon over and have a ride.

LOOK ALIKES. Johnny de Cicco, leader of the Club Cabana's Smartones, looks like Eddie Duchin. Yes, he does! . . . Hank Bryant, guitarist with George Berg's band in the Dubonnet Room, is called "Li'l Abner" by his fellow bandsmen.

SORORITY AND FRATERNITY TUNES will soon be a specialty of the Neptune Room's Neil Neilson. He's getting up a collection of them, official and otherwise. He'll be glad to hear from you about the pet tunes of your sorority or frat.

The Casino Royal is doing some heavy thinking about presenting floor shows, which they discontinued early in the war. Present outlook is that you'll be seeing revues in the C. R. some time in September.

FOOD—IT'S MARVELOUS! The Old New Orleans is going off the deep end in providing unusual delicacies. Hors d'ouevres Louisiana, crab gumbo and French onion soups, iron pot chicken are a few of their rarities. Chef Ahmed is a kitchen genius, used to cook for Hailie Selassie. . . . Know why everything always tastes so wonderful at Olmsted's? Head men Brahms and Mitchell personally taste every item on both luncheon and dinner menu. If it isn't perfection—out it goes! . . . Are you a connoisseur of cheese blintzes and strudel? Then you'd better go to Hoffman's dairy restaurant and have a wonderful time. . . . Parchey's jumbo devilled crab cakes are served with plenty of tartar sauce. Ketchup would be a desecration . . . The resourceful Lone Star is now serving delicately flavored Oriental sheesh-kebab in addition to their venison, wild turkey and guinea hens.

Arabs Warned To BePrepared For Bloodshed

Jerusalem, June 2 (AP).—Jamal Effendi Husseini, chairman of the Palestine Arab higher committee, told an Arab Party rally today to be ready "to defend the country with your blood."

"Before us stand 80,000 members of the Haganah (Jewish defense organization) ready to smash us," Husseini said. "Are you prepared against this danger—have you trained your sons and daughters?"

The crowd, estimated at 3000, heard Husseini and half a dozen other Arab speakers. Each mention of the name of the exiled Grand Mufti of Jerusalem was cheered. A huge portrait of the Grand Mufti decorated the speakers platform.

Husseini outlined his efforts to unify Palestine's six Arab parties into the higher committee.

He said he recently rejected two Communist members because "we want only Nationalists subscribing to the national cause." Husseini claimed that 95 per cent of the Palestine Arabs supported the Arab Party.
